BRITAIN RUSHES SHIPS AND TROOPS TO HOLY LAND WAR

Arab Tribes From Trans-Jordan Reported Massed on Palestine Frontier in Latest Outbreak.

33 PERSONS DEAD IN 2-DAY FIGHTING

Jewish People Are Warned by Leaders Not To Be Drawn Into Civil War.

JERUSALEM, July 7.—(AP)—Arab tribes from Trans-Jordan were reported massed on the Palestine frontier tonight as Britain sped warships and troops to smash the bloodiest Jewish-Arab race outbreak in the Holy Land's recent history.

Simultaneously, Jewish leaders warned their people against being "drawn into civil war."

In a pitched battle lasting four hours British troops fought a band of 600 Arabs said to have just crossed the border from Trans-Jordan, east of Palestine and a part of Britain's Palestine mandate but governed by a local Arab administration.

Five Arabs were reported killed and eight wounded. There were no British casualties.

Total casualties in two days of rioting and battling were 33 killed, 111 wounded.

However, a number of Arabs were said to have succeeded in entering Palestine and to have joined their comrades in the hills fighting for "Arab independence."

The tribesmen were said to be massing south of "Tegart's wall," the $500,000 electrified fence recently completed along the Syrian border, north of Palestine, to keep troublemakers out of the country.

The news of Arab reinforcements was received as Britain ordered two battalions of troops, each normally consisting of more than 800 men, from Egypt at the earliest possible date.

Already at Haifa were the British cruisers Emerald and Enterprise, each of more than 7,500 tons. Both arrived as the result of an emergency call.

En route to the scene was the mighty 32,000-ton cruiser Repulse, detached from its Mediterranean patrol duties at Malta to relieve the Emerald, whose homeward journey from the East Indies was interrupted by the summons for reinforcements.

A spokesman at military headquarters said 8,500 British troops now were in the Holy Land. Police and other units brought the security forces to 10,000. Sailors and marines from the Repulse and Enterprise would augment Britain's armed might by 1,700 men.

Hizzoner Struggles With His Chicken in One Piece

"It would take a dissecting artist and an anatomical expert to carve this piece of chicken," mumbles Mayor Hartsfield as he struggles to wriggle free from the two pair of shoulders that are gluing his elbows to his sides. After a round of banquets the mayor yesterday advocated a return to the old southern style of smaller pieces. Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen said he would sponsor such a resolution in council.

SENATOR DEFENDS TVA INVESTIGATION

Justice Department Will Oppose Dr. Morgan's Efforts to Regain Post.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 7.—(AP)—The pending congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority and the fight of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan to regain his post of TVA director-chairman shared the spotlight here today. The day's developments included:

(1) A statement from Chairman Vic Donahey, Democrat, Ohio, that the investigating committee was not created to "injure TVA" but to "find out and report whether the board of directors, their experts and employees are administering the TVA properly."

Changes in Fulton Taxes Explained As Effort To Equalize Assessments

Changes in this year's tax bills—stances where discrepancies occur in property of like nature.

"For instance, take two properties in Buckhead, one assessed at $4,000 and the other assessed at $8,000. They are properties that are similar in footage, condition and location. Yet there is this wide discrepancy.

"The reason for the discrepancy was that value was based on what the taxpayer rated his property," Dr. Adams declined to comment on revenue anticipated through equalization, but pointed out that the field book has placed much property on the tax books which was previously not returned.

Assessments ranging from 40 to 60 per cent of the market value are likely, he also said, adding that "this has not been worked out completely as yet, however."

"Equalization means just that—equalizing the taxable property," he concluded.

There Ought to Be a Law—; Councilmen Join Hartsfield in Fight.

By LUKE GREENE.

Prospects of a law to protect lovers of southern fried chicken appeared yesterday after Mayor Hartsfield had launched a bitter attack on the widespread practice of serving half the fowl in one big piece.

"Let's get back to the old southern style," the mayor pleaded. "Let's have our chicken cut into more pieces. Why there ought to be a law—"

Immediately several councilmen came to the mayor's rescue. Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen, the man who sponsored the movement to get higher awnings for tall men, said he'd introduce a resolution in council requiring chickens to be thoroughly dissected before they are allowed to tempt the appetites of innocent people.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—Representative Connery, Democrat, Massachusetts, said today here is evidence the Radio Corporation of America, "or those officially acting for it, corrupted elected representatives, debauched judicial officials and looted and defrauded their own stockholders."

Connery, in a statement printed in the last issue of the Congressional Record, which was published today, also said RCA "or those acting for it" paid "some $28,000,000 in dividends to preferred stockholders when their total earnings were less than $12,000,000."

JAPANESE TROOPS QUIT SETTLEMENT, EASE TENSENESS

Nearly 1,000 Chinese Are Crowded Into Jails in One of Greatest Precautionary Measures in City

POLICE PARALYZE TRAFFIC IN SEARCH

2 Cotton Mill Employees Are Killed in Sector Guarded by U.S. Marines

SHANGHAI, July 8.—(Friday) (AP)—Japanese soldiers and plainclothesmen withdrew from the International Settlement today easing a situation already made tense by an outbreak of anti-Japanese terrorism.

International Settlement authorities made sharp protests when Japanese soldiers appeared on Nanking road and began patrolling close to British Seaford High-landers on emergency duty after the outbreak inaugurating the first anniversary of the war yesterday.

Another detachment of armed Japanese in civilian clothes boldly took posts on Avenue Edward VII, bordering the settlement and the French concession. They stopped and searched numerous Chinese suspected of terrorist activities.

Settlement police and military units continued a patrol, unprecedented for its strictness, in an effort to suppress gunmen and bomb throwers who yesterday killed four and wounded five persons.

Nearly 1,000 Chinese were crowded into jails by settlement authorities in one of the greatest precautionary manhunt in Shanghai history.

Two employees of a Japanese cotton mill, en route to work, were killed in the sector guarded by United States Marines.

A Japanese sentry killed a Chinese and wounded three when a grenade was thrown at a Japanese guard post on Yuyaching road bridge linking the settlement with Japanese-occupied Hongkew.

A British colonial soldier was wounded.

(In Japan the anniversary was observed with thousands of solemn pilgrimages to military shrines and symbolic personal sacrifices to meet Japan's war needs.)

The day brought little change in the military situation.

A communique from Hankow announced Chinese had withdrawn Tuesday night from Hukow, on the Yangtze.

Daring Gowns Hidden As Debs Make Bow

LONDON, July 7.—(AP)—Flustered debutantes appeared at tonight's court presentation with modest additions to low-cut gowns which court circles had hinted were too peek-a-bo.

Unable to arrange for new costumes in a limited time at least, seven debutantes fell back on scarves. Dressmakers hurriedly made the concealing drapes to match the gowns and the debs draped them around their shoulders when curtseying before the King.

Frowns wrinkled noble brows last night when society buds wore the year's lowest in necklines and daring bodice effects, and gossips predicted the Earl of Clarendon, the lord chamberlain, would do something about it.

All-Stars Beaten By Crackers, 14-4

Paul Richards' league-leading Atlanta Crackers overwhelmed the Southern league All-Stars, 14-4, before a crowd of 15,025 last night at Ponce de Leon park.

The Crackers made 15 hits and three opposition errors account for their runs as they won the inaugural of the all-star game.

CHANDLER TRAILS BARKLEY BADLY IN VOTER SURVEY

New Deal Senator Given Heavy Majority Even Before President's Visit to the Scene of Battle.

MANY UNDECIDED ON CASTING VOTE

Governor, However, Must Draw From Opponent's Total To Win in Race.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, July 7.—As President Roosevelt swings into Kentucky to go to bat for his New Deal stalwart, Senator Barkley, who faces a fight in the senatorial primary, a special survey of Kentucky Democrats finds Barkley leading his opponent, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, two to one.

The Barkley-Chandler fight has been given national significance by political writers, most of whom think the election will be close. But a survey completed by the Institute just before the President's visit to Kentucky, finds Democratic sentiment in the state dividing as follows at the present time:

For Barkley 64%
For Chandler 36%

Able Campaigner.

However, the future may not be all smooth sailing for the Barkley forces. Governor Chandler is noted throughout the state as an able and spectacular campaigner. With the election still four weeks off, he may develop campaign tactics which will change sentiment. He controls state patronage and a well-oiled political machine with which to match the Barkley forces. And, most important of all, there are enough undecided Democratic voters to increase the Chandler vote considerably if most of them decide to cast their ballots for him on election day.

The survey found that the majority of Democrats in the state—86 in every 100—have decided how they will vote, and it is among this group that Barkley is leading two to one. The other 14 in every 100 or 14 per cent, say they have not yet made up their minds. In the event that most of them decide for Chandler between now and August 6, Barkley would have only a slight edge over his opponent.

Following Survey.

Hence, as the President proceeds to Kentucky, one vital question is: will his visit influence the undecided voters to join the Barkley camp? To measure the effect of his visit, the Institute will conduct a new survey beginning a few days after the President leaves the state. A final survey on the Barkley-Chandler contest will be made just before the election.

The Institute has found from

Bund Member Declares Salute Of Nazis To Replace U. S. Form

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., July 7.—(AP)—Martin E. Wunderlich, a member of the German-American Volksbund, amid angry members in the Suffolk county courtroom, predicted today the Nazi salute of Hitler's Germany would replace the American form of saluting the flag.

A witness in the trial of six directors of the German-American Settlement League, a Bund affiliate, Wunderlich was asked by Prosecutor Henry to salute the Stars and Stripes.

Wunderlich responded by raising his arm in the stiff gesture of the Hitler salute.

"Is that the American salute?" Henry asked sharply.

"No," Wunderlich said. "But it will be."

The witness also said he believed there would be a National Socialist party formed in the United States on Hitler lines.

Lawrence Camp Is Among Group Requesting Talk

President To Make One of Greatest Campaign Drives in His Career During Extended Jaunt.

LAUNCHES FIGHT IN OHIO TALK TODAY

Will Later Drop Down Into Kentucky, Where Barkley Faces Contest.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt left tonight for one of the greatest campaign drives of his career—a transcontinental tour in behalf of his unfinished New Deal program and of "liberal" candidates for office in the 1938 Democratic primaries.

Laboring all day at top speed, the President had his desk fairly clear of official business before the time came for his departure by special train at 10:30 o'clock, Atlanta time, tonight.

One major addition was made to his itinerary—an addition which will give him an opportunity, if he chooses to use it, to lay a finger of disapproval on the renomination campaign of Senator George, Democrat, Georgia.

Accepts Invitation.

He accepted an invitation of a delegation of Georgians, including Lawrence Camp, of Atlanta, who is in the race against George, to speak at Barnesville August 11 "on any subject you may deem of interest to Georgians." William G. McRae, of Atlanta, and former Governor Eugene Talmadge also oppose George.

George has opposed the administration on occasion. The Georgia speech will be made after Mr. Roosevelt has completed his swing across the nation and has taken a leisurely cruise down the Pacific coast, through the Panama Canal and back to Pensacola, Fla.

The occasion for the first address of the tour will be a celebration at Marietta, Ohio, tomorrow of the 150th anniversary of the settling of the northwest territory. The President arrives at Marietta about 9 a. m., Atlanta time, and leaves about 10:30 a. m. The time of the speech has not been announced definitely, but it will be broadcast nationally.

Kentucky Speech.

Later in the day, the President will drop down to Kentucky, where he is expected to leave voters in no uncertainty about his desire for renomination of Senator Barkley, Democratic leader. He will make a major talk at Covington between 3:20 p. m. and 4:20 p. m., Atlanta time. This address also will be broadcast nationally.

He will make shorter talks at Louisville about 7:20 p. m., Atlanta time.

President Is Invited to Speak There 'On Any Subject You May Deem of Interest to Georgians.'

POLITICAL LEADERS QUAKE IN PROSPECT

Prepare to Walk Tight Rope, Awaiting Reaction of State's Voters.

By RALPH MCGILL.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday entered the Democratic primary in Georgia.

He accepted an invitation extended by a group of Georgians to speak at Barnesville August 11. Included in the group presenting the invitation was Lawrence S. Camp, who is opposing Senator Walter F. George for the Democratic nomination to the United States senate.

The President, who left Washington last night for Marietta, Ohio, on the first leg of a nationwide tour which will end in Georgia, was invited to speak at Barnesville "on any subject you may deem of interest to Georgians." The President already has said he deems the primaries of interest.

Speculation Stirred.

The announcement precipitated speculation as to the President's course. Political headquarters over the state could be said, without any exaggeration, to be seething. None doubted the President would enter the primary.

A few believed he would confine his remarks to a plea that voters of Georgia elect a "liberal" friendly to New Deal plans.

Others believed he would "put his arm around" Camp and urge his election.

Meanwhile, many political leaders were preparing to learn how to walk a tightrope between now and August 11. Acceptance of the invitation to speak at Barnesville means the President probably will spend at least two nights in Georgia, one before and one following his Barnesville speech. He is scheduled to receive an honorary degree at the University of Georgia the morning of the day his Barnesville speech is scheduled. He has informed university officials he will make no reference to politics in his speech at Athens.

The group which extended the invitation did not contain among its members Senator Richard B. Russell or Governor Rivers.

RICE FLOUR MUFFINS—2 large tablespoons soft boiled hominy, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 pint rice flour, 1 pint milk, 1 1-4 teaspoons baking powder. Stir into hominy the butter. When cool, beat in the yolks of eggs, salt, sugar, milk, rice flour with the baking powder sifted in. Lastly, the beaten whites. Fill muffin pans three-quarters full and bake in moderately hot oven. This makes a delightful hot bread for breakfast.

Editor's note: It is strange that with the western army annihilated, "Beast Butler" occupying New Orleans, and the "Iron Man," General William T. Sherman, battering at the gates of Atlanta, the Confederacy would not acknowledge defeat and went on with plans for next year's campaign. Fear was felt in Charleston for friends and relatives in Atlanta and doors were flung wide to receive the refugees, who left the city in hordes as the Union army advanced.

And the Bride? Yes, She's Mentioned Too

The priest was his brother, the Rev. Austin Joseph Larkin.

The altar boy was their father, Edward R. Larkin, railroad conductor.

And the bride was Mary Ellen Reimer, 22.

THREE MEALS A DAY

HOME TESTED RECIPES
BY Sally Saver

Questions about recipes or menus will be answered if you will write or phone the editor of this column at Walnut 6565.

Folks have been writing from all parts of the south that they are finding Sally Saver's contests useful and practical, and Sally is more than delighted. That's the real purpose of the contests: to bring friends together, to share each other's recipes and experiences in cooking. Every mail brings new and exciting recipes for you to try.

For instance today, suggestions for using buttermilk have been received that include Buttermilk Sherbet, Buttermilk Frosting, Buttermilk Cakes, Buttermilk Custard, Gingerbread, Buttermilk Rolls and many, many others.

We just couldn't print them all and had to make a choice of the most unusual to publish. You will like them, too, and they will afford you an opportunity to include more milk in your daily diet.

Have you ever tried a Fruited Buttermilk Shake? For a cool, nutritious, refreshing drink, it can't be beat. Here's how to make it:

Fruited Buttermilk Shake.
4 cups buttermilk
2-3 oranges
1 lemon
1-4 cup cold water sugar
few grains salt
Combine the fruit juices, salt, buttermilk and cold water. Add sugar to taste. Beat until well blended and pour over crushed ice.

And here's a Danish recipe for Buttermilk Soup that Sally knows will be new to most of you. Mr. Ralph McGill, who just came back from Europe, gave Sally this unusual recipe which graces the table of every Danish home at least once a week.

Buttermilk Soup.
For six persons take four ounces of rice flour and two quarts of buttermilk. The rice flour and some of the buttermilk is mixed in a saucepan until smooth, and the rest of the cold milk, a little lemon peel, a stick of cinnamon, and some scalded raisins added.

It is necessary to stir well from the minute the milk is put over the fire as otherwise the milk is liable to curdle. Put in the yolk of two eggs with a tablespoon of sugar and beat well. The soup is poured over this and served at once.

Some finely chopped almonds may be added, and ice-cold whipped cream is delicious with it.

Buttermilk fudge is something different that you will want to try soon. This recipe, sent by Mrs. V. F. Todd, 985 Adair avenue, Atlanta, wins $1 prize.

Buttermilk Fudge.
1 cup buttermilk
2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
Mix buttermilk and sugar and put over low flame. Stir as little as possible.

When it forms a soft ball in cold water take off flame. Add butter and vanilla. Beat until creamy. Then pour into a shallow buttered pan, and cut into squares when cool.

Buttermilk Pie.
2 cups buttermilk
2 tablespoons flour (mix with sugar)
1-2 teaspoon soda
1 whole egg and yolks of four others
1-4 cup sugar
Stir all together and bake in two pastry shells.

Whip the whites of the four eggs until stiff, add 8 level tablespoons sugar and three drops lemon extract for meringue.

Here is a good easy-to-make cheese recipe that Mrs. Greene Henderson Sr., Route 2, Lawrenceville, Ga., suggests:

Cheddar.
Have ready 4 quarts thick sour milk. Pour 3 quarts boiling water into the milk and let it stand 3 minutes. Turn into a large bag and let it drain overnight.

In the morning, measure the curd and to each pint of curd add 2 tablespoons melted (but not browned) butter, 1 teaspoon salt, a few grains pepper and a little cream. Beat until smooth and soft. Use as needed.

THE BRIDE ENTERTAINS.
Plan a meal when you entertain.

SISTERSVILLE, W. Va., July 7. (AP)—Walter Smith Sugden, 58, immediate past national potentate of the Shrine, died tonight. He had been in a coma since Wednesday after a cerebral hemorrhage. Although in ill health for the last two years, Sugden presided at the annual Shrine convention in Los Angeles last month until election of his successor, Andrew A. D. Rahn, of Minneapolis. Born in Amsterdam, N. Y., Sugden was graduated from Andover Academy in Massachusetts and from the Harvard University law school. He played center on the Harvard football team in 1903. He came to Sistersville in 1906 and four years later was admitted to the West Virginia bar.

Aged Woman Suffers Fracture of Skull; Another Breaks Leg by Tripping Over Board; Boy Falls on Stick in Jump; Girl Swallows Pin.

A 5-year-old boy, a 13-year-old girl, one woman, 68, and another, 81, were sent to Grady hospital yesterday by a series of freak home accidents. Most seriously injured of the group was Mrs. Almada Dickinson, 81, of 1214 Avon avenue, who suffered a depressed fracture of the skull by falling from a rocking chair at her home. Hospital attaches described her condition as "critical." Franklin B. Tippet, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tippet, 424 Adams street, N. E., almost tore out the roof of his mouth when he slipped and fell on a stick he held as he jumped from a first-floor window. His mother, seated on the front porch, saw him fall. He was in "poor" condition last night. Mary Frances Locke, 13, who lives with her brother at 267 Richardson street, S. W., was admitted for observation after accidentally swallowing an open safety pin. Doctors said she was not in danger but deferred decision on a possible operation. A peaceful stroll near her home in Alpharetta resulted in a broken leg for Mrs. John T. Scott, 68. Attached said she tripped over a broken board on a bridge. Her condition was said to be "fair" last night.

MRS. ESTELLE AIKEN GETS FIRST DECREE

Says Escape Artist Married Her Under an Assumed Name.

Mrs. Estelle Hall Aiken, wife of Sam Aiken, Georgia prison escape artist, was granted a first verdict yesterday in Fulton divorce court in her divorce suit against Aiken, now serving a life term in Tattall prison for murder of his first wife. Aiken was sentenced to death in 1929 for the murder of his first wife and Boyce Hunter, but escaped from Fulton tower. Deposition of the second Mrs. Aiken, who is at her home in Houston, Texas, was read to the court.

She testified Aiken married her under an assumed name and that she knew nothing of his prison record until officers arrested him in Texas. She said she "did all I could to save his life" and was successful in getting his death penalty commuted to life sentence. Court attaches said Aiken married a third woman in Texas last winter after his escape from the Berrien county prison camp. The "smallest attorney in the world," B. L. Holbrook, who stands 42 inches high and weighs 63 pounds, won a final decree for Mrs. Beatrice S. Cowart in her suit against M. K. Cowart.

"Colonel" Holbrook, 25-year-old graduate of Emory University Law School, delivered arguments to the divorce jury for Attorney H. W. McLarty. Jurors had to lean over the edge of the jury box failing to get a clear view of the midday attorney.

"The colonel is the smallest attorney in the world—that is, in size, not brains," Judge Virlyn B. Moore told the jury.

Memorial to Longstreet Proposed As Gainesville Defends General

GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 7. (AP)—A memorial at Gainesville for General James E. Longstreet, Confederate leader, is proposed by the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce in its current bulletin.

Longstreet spent his last years in Gainesville, dying in 1904. He is buried in Alta Vista cemetery. The chamber of commerce in its bulletin also came to the defense of Longstreet, whose tactics at the battle of Gettysburg have been criticized and came in for a discussion at the recent reunion at the battle site. "In W. E. Woodward's 'Life of General U. S. Grant,' the bulletin says, 'the states that Longstreet and Grant were at West Point together, served in the United States army together and that Longstreet was an attendant at Grant's wedding.'"

"So when Grant was president, thinking he would soften the hard feelings between the north and south, he offered the position of collector of the port at New Orleans to his old friend, General Longstreet, who like many other southerners had a large family and was broke."

"Unfortunately, the carpetbag regime further intensified the bitterness of southerners, so General Longstreet came in for more than the ordinary share of criticism and was even blamed by some partisans with the loss of the battle of Gettysburg. Whatever one's opinion may be on the subject, history records that he was a great tactician and a great fighter."

CARDOZO CONDITION CONTINUES SERIOUS

Justice Kept Under Oxygen Tent at Lehman Home.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—The condition of Associate Justice Benjamin Cardozo of the United States supreme court, has remained unchanged for the last two days, his secretary, Joseph Rauh, announced tonight.

WOMAN, 24, IS SAVED IN 6-STORY PLUNGE

NEW YORK, July 8 (Friday)—(AP)—An attractive blonde who plunged from a sixth floor window of a smart East Side hotel early today was saved from death by a net hastily spread by a dozen firemen from a neighboring station.

The firemen were summoned after passersby noticed her on the window ledge.

Two dozen guests witnessed the plunge and spectacular rescue from the windows of their rooms. The woman was identified as Miss Muriel Strong, 24.

A French physician in 1854 gilded his body all over with gilt paint to disprove the old story that this once killed a boy—and the physician was found hours later unconscious and had to be saved by rubbing off the smothering coat with alcohol.

BRANCH APPOINTED TO AVIATION POST

Former Atlantan Becomes Vice Chairman as Civil Authority Is Named.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—Edward J. Noble, widely known industrialist and aviation enthusiast of New York state, became head today of the new civil aeronautics authority empowered to regulate aviation.

For vice chairman, the President named Harlee Branch, second assistant postmaster general. Branch, formerly of Atlanta, is in charge of the Post Office Department's air mail activities, which will be transferred to the new authority.

Other members of the authority are:

G. Grant Mason, of Washington, D. C., in charge of Pan American Airways' Latin-American division with headquarters in Havana, Cuba.

Robert Hinckley, of Utah, in charge of Works Progress Administration activities for far western states.

Oswald Ryan, of Anderson, Ind., general counsel of the Federal Power Commission.

$12,000 Salaries.

The President appointed Clinton M. Hester, of Montana, assistant general counsel of the Treasury, to be administrator, a post regarded by some as the most important created by the civil aeronautics act.

Many of the functions of the five-member authority will be quasi-judicial, while the administrator will supervise practically all of the strictly administrative work.

Members of the authority and the administrator will receive $12,000 annually.

The President also appointed two of the three members of the safety board created by the act. They are Thomas O. Hardin, of Texas, vice president of the Air Line Pilots, and Sumner Smith, of Alabama, in charge of airport and airways activities of the WPA.

They will receive $7,500 a year.

To Co-ordinate Activities.

The last congress created the civil aeronautics authority to co-ordinate all civil aviation activities. The authority will take over the functions of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce, which has about 2,600 employees, and the Post Office and Interstate Commerce Commission Air and Mail Bureau, which have several hundred employees between them.

Noble's home is on Round Hill, Greenwich, Conn., but his wide business activities center in New York state.

Described as interested in aviation since its inception, Noble owns a large cabin plane, which he uses for frequent trips, and was one of the first to own an auto-gyro. He has made large investments in aviation companies, but he already has disposed of these holdings.

He generally is recognized as a liberal Republican.

Branch, a native of Polkton, N. C., where he was born December 24, 1879, is a veteran of the newspaper business. His career took him from the position of typesetter to that of Washington correspondent.

After serving as Washington correspondent for the Atlanta Journal from 1928 to 1933, he became an executive assistant to the postmaster general, and was elevated to the second assistant postmaster generalship in January, 1934.

JURY WILL RESUME PROBE TOMORROW

The new jury, sworn in for a two-month term Tuesday, will take up routine business today following it up with quizzing of Cobb and other graft probe witnesses, it was understood.

Ford Patents 'Saddle' Motor For Rear of Auto

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(P)—Henry Ford, still a prolific inventor, patented today a new "saddle" motor to be mounted over the rear axle of passenger automobiles.

The idea of a rear motor, which may result in drastic redesign of the automobile of the future just as buses have been revamped by transferring the motor from front to rear, is not a new one, the automobile manufacturer declared.

However, he said in his patent application, the motor itself is a new development in that it can be placed in the rear of pleasure cars without upsetting their delicate balance. In addition to being quieter, the new motor will be more efficient and will reduce repair bills, Ford contended.

Previously the rear-axle motors, such as those used in buses, have been unbalanced. Their weight was almost entirely on one side and the driving gears were at the other end of the axle.

In the new invention, Ford said, the cylinder block and crankshaft are mounted over one-half of the axle and the engine, flywheel, clutch and other heavy parts are balanced over the other half with a rigid shaft connecting them.

The driving gears, connected with the two balanced halves of the engine, are located exactly at the middle of the axle.

"We expect to make an arrest within 24 hours. We're looking for a woman we believe committed the crime."

Wallis said since the receipt of an anonymous postcard by police yesterday, the writing on which named a woman as the slayer, he has felt he was nearing a solution of the case.

Unless an appeal to the Florida supreme court halts plans for the execution, McCall will be put to death in the electric chair at Raiford state prison soon after Governor Cone signs the death warrant. Legal requirements make the week of July 18 the earliest time the execution could be held.

LOYALISTS GAIN ON VALENCIA FRONT

Hurl Back Rebels and Bring Their Attack to Standstill.

HENDY, France (at the Spanish Frontier), July 7.—(P)—Spanish government militiamen today brought to a standstill the insurgent drive on Valencia and announced the first gain in three days of fighting.

Dispatches from Madrid said General Jose Miaja's warriors drove the enemy back into hills of the Sierra de Mora, 20 miles southeast of Teruel and 45 miles inland from the Mediterranean.

The insurgent attacks there appeared directed at Sarrión, important communications center on the Teruel-Sagunto highway, and Mora de Rubielos, north of the road and east of the Sierra de Mora.

Today's action brought to a climax three days of heavy fighting for which Generalissimo Franco's general staff had elaborated well-laid plans only to have them disrupted by the militiamen's resistance.

The last of the coal from the Valley Camp Coal Company's Soudan mine was removed last Thursday and a few of the normal force of 215 miners today were busy dismantling the machinery in preparation for sealing the shaft.

Idle miners, wandering past the company's office, found the notice of the sale July 15 posted beside this sign:

POSTMASTER FARLEY HEADS FOR ALASKA

NEW YORK, July 7.—(P)—Postmaster General James A. LABOR OFFICIALS TO DISCUSS WAGES

Southern Commissioners Will Meet in Columbia on Textile Situation.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7.—(P)—John W. Nates, South Carolina labor commissioner, said tonight he expected labor commissioners of at least six southeastern states to attend the conference he called for tomorrow to discuss the "trend toward lower textile wages."

Nates said the object was "to put a floor to wages—to avoid any reduction," adding "if the commissioners agree, it is possible we might call a meeting of textile employers to discuss this."

Officials from North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi have indicated they would attend, Nates said. Governors of these states are co-operating, he said.

Walter Taylor, assistant director of the division of conciliation of the Federal Department of Labor, will attend.

Discussion will also probably center about hours of labor, Nates said.

A number of textile mills of this state recently announced they would resume full-time operations with wage reductions.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

While great strides are being made in Georgia toward a better life for all, never before has it been more imperative that the people prepare for the consolidation of these gains in order to enable future generations to advance still further.

Today, the state is receiving huge sums of money from the federal government, poured into rural electrification, farm improvements, farm purchases for tenant farmers, new school buildings, parks, roads, housing and education generally. In the not far distant days to come this fountain must slack in its flow. It is then the crucial period in the development of Georgia will be faced. It is for that day that the state must now prepare, so that the benefits being derived now will be retained for the people and for their posterity.

The answer lies in co-operation and education. The two must go hand in hand. To operate, co-operation in the American sense must be accompanied by understanding between all factors in the economy. Political systems and politicians cannot furnish the answer. This must come from the people, by the sacrifice of all for the common good. It is for this goal that the people of the state must strive and delay may prove tragic should the advances of the recent years be lost in inertia.

Today there exists no adequate means through which this work may be accomplished. Individually, many have worked to the goal, but the task is not one which can be completely carried out without joint action.

Men of vision in DeKalb county have laid the groundwork for the type of co-operation necessary for attainment of the objective. However, the DeKalb County Chamber of Agriculture and Commerce furnishes but a model of an organization which should be state-wide in conception and operation.

Georgia has also a fact-finding committee, studies of which point the paths which must be followed in the future. Yet, to all practical intents, the studies become valueless when not accompanied by an organization which can place the facts before the body of the population for the discussions which precede remedial action.

Antiquated methods of government exist solely because the benefits of a more modern system are not placed with sufficient emphasis before the mass of the people, in whom rest the ultimate responsibility and the cost.

Obsolete farming methods that drain the life blood of the soil continue because the message has not been brought with sufficient emphasis to the farmers stranger to modern operation and practices. This is costly, not only to the farmers, but to all Georgians. Through co-operation this condition can be, in large measure, alleviated.

Georgia faces a future in which undreamed-of riches can be given to the people. The greatest step toward this future is a preparation today for the responsibilities of tomorrow. Business and educational leaders in each county hold the key. Their sense of civic duty should require that they look beyond the confines of their own circles and interests to the general good that is to be derived from the co-operation of rural and urban groups to meet the needs of Georgia.

CONSISTENCY STILL A JEWEL

Particularly in those countries dominated by one-man governments, consistency is still a jewel. Signor Mussolini, having led his people into believing Italy is a great self-sustaining empire, frequently experiences difficulties in maintaining his position. One of his most reliable arguments for sustaining the fallacy is simply to point out, from time to time, the "weaknesses" of democracy as compared with the "strength" of dictatorship.

Now, no one who has taken the trouble to appraise Il Duce's work will deny he has done many things not only enormously beneficial but necessary to his people's existence as a nation. Not the least of these was improving the quality of Italian wheat and increasing the yield. When he assumed control the country was far deficient in supplying itself with needed bread. But Mussolini set himself to the task in thorough-going manner. Intensive cultivation was the remedy. In a remarkably short time he succeeded in increasing production per acre to a level higher than anywhere in the world.

He gradually made Italy self-sustaining as far as bread was concerned. It was a notable accomplishment.

This year's crop, however, is short. The crop in the United States is enormous. But would Mussolini think of mentioning this "phenomenon" to his people? Certainly not! On the contrary, he blandly tells the usual cheering throngs that even if there were a shortage, even if Italy needed bread to sustain the life of the people, he would buy no wheat from the "so-called democracies." Nor does he enlighten them as to where he would buy it or what he would use for money. Perhaps he will get it in Germany, his chief ally in bread and other shortages. Consistency is still a jewel. It has to be in the totalitarian state.

MAY FRIENDSHIPS LONG ENDURE

Since President Lazaro Cardenas, of Mexico, took over American-owned oil properties, the early feeling of uneasiness among businessmen which followed has grown into a fear that expropriation would not only be broadened to include other property, but encouraged in other Latin-American countries.

While sentiment is still strong among American businessmen to check the trend by firm action before it goes too far, another view is to allow Cardenas to undo himself on the wreckage of his own impractical theories. This, it is contended, would be a lesson to other countries. It would scare them off permanently from such ideas.

But the very thing feared, the spreading of propaganda to encourage seizures in other countries, has become a reality. Following a radio broadcast to an audience of 15,000 people in Havana, President Cardenas has dispatched envoys to Cuba, Argentina, Brazil, Venezuela, Salvador, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Colombia to develop sentiment for expropriations in these countries.

Measured by the results in Mexico, however, where vital oil production has slumped 35 per cent since the seizure, expropriation is not likely to develop into a reality in many other countries. The labor movement, which was supposed to have obtained advantages from the seizure, has suffered a tremendous set-back because of unemployment. General business has fallen off; 75,000 textile workers are being laid off.

Investors in the United States, however, are more disturbed over prospects of seizures in Colombia and Cuba, than in other countries. President Eduardo Santos, of Colombia, has a leaning toward the Cardenas theories of government. He feels expropriations would give his nation a better chance to tap its own resources; that they would enrich the country with a minimum of effort. As to Cuba, rumors have reached the State Department that Colonel Fulgencio Batista is lending a willing ear to the suggestion that American sugar properties be taken over by the government. Such rumors, however, should be taken with a large grain of salt.

To suppose that Cuba, of all countries, would enter into the execution of Cardenas' impractical scheme is absurd. Colonel Batista is nothing if not a realist. He has no misconceptions as to what strained relations between his country and the United States would mean. Such a thing is not only not contemplated, but unthinkable.

As an indication of continued good will between the two peoples, the Fourth of July has recently been designated in the island republic as a Cuban holiday, in compliment to the United States. Last Monday, her harbors, her public and private buildings, were decorated for the occasion. Streets were enlivened with flags and bunting; restaurants, theaters and other places of amusement were thrown open, free of charge, to visiting Americans.

No. There will be no strained relations between Cuba and the United States. The peoples of the two nations will never cease to remember the occasion of their ever enduring friendship.

A second guess at the identity of the mystery planes bombing British shipping off Spain will never be as right as the first.

The trend in social thought is bound to make us a better people. Already a new love for elderly parents is remarked in states having old age pensions.

This isn't the world as we knew it. In the Far East, China fights back. On the seas, where she was supreme, Britannia now waives the rule.

THOSE BURNING BRIDGES

(From The Montgomery Advertiser.)

Accompanying the maiming of contemporary economic structures is an evil far more dangerous than any crisis faced in recent times. The dissipation of faith in treaties, contracts and obligations despite the knowledge that reliable contracts between human beings are essential to progress marks a blight on civilization comparable to the actual barbaric practices now indulged in Europe and the Orient. When men were convinced that civilization is but the evidence of a steady climb upward, and that because of it good and justice must ultimately triumph, they were able and willing to sacrifice themselves for a cause that they believed righteous. The triumph of moral indecency and the selfish practices of leaders who adopt the slogan that the end justifies the means and that the majority of men are basically nothing more than chattels, has so upset the equilibrium of the world that basic faith in life itself has been shaken.

Moderns may scoff at sentimental ideas of honor and chivalry but without them the human animal must slowly be reduced to a primitive character. When one observes the spectacle of a powerful nation repudiating responsibility for its own countrymen on the high seas, and when governments all over the world deny financial obligations contracted in all good faith, there is little wonder that individual man sees his whole world of ideals spinning.

The first duty of any government in organized society is to safeguard the lives and properties of the people from whom it collects tribute. The next step is to educate citizens and safeguard their health. Following these should be protection against extortionate demands upon consumers. From these basic governmental functions naturally spring a host of complicated laws. Man after much suffering has learned to rely upon certain institutions to protect him from the conflicts on every side. He has caught a glimpse of safety where the rules of the jungle no longer apply and recognition of this state of existence includes responsibility for a present that yields to a progressive, more comfortable future. When both present and future are jeopardized by repudiation of ethical standards that the human being has learned to value and trust the philosopher is depressed. Man must have faith in himself and in his fellows to survive.

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The Merry-Go-Round of Death.

NEW YORK—One of General Franco's assistants in speaking of the reorganization of Spain after the present war is over, mentioned that "the Spanish Empire will again cast its eyes westward to the American hemisphere and resume her legitimate place in the sun." He followed this up with the remark that Franco intends to have an aerial armada of 2,000 machines in the air by any time to defend Spanish independence. Plus a first-class army with tanks and the rest of it, of course.

In other words, another power is about to enter the race. The merry-go-round goes on and on. It is obvious that a strong military Spain will change the whole military line-up in Europe. Hitherto, France did not need to bother about her Pyrenean border and the many cities in the south were relatively a safe refuge in days of war. With 2,000 airplanes massed just across the border, the picture changes.

In Power Of Dictators.

A blind man can see that Franco is not going to come into the democratic camp. He could not, if he would. He is completely in the power of the bigger dictators; in fact, he could not exist a year without their active support. It looks very much as if Spain is going to become an arena, on the back door of France, an armed camp controlled by Messrs. Hitler, Mussolini and Franco.

That this is also the view of the French authorities is evidenced by the creation of an entire new army corps in France and the decision to station a section of the colonial army in the motherland. Colored troops are pouring in from Africa and Tonkin-China and Syria and Morocco, according to news-dispatches in the French papers.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES

The queerest creatures
Ever made
Are human beings
On parade;
The funniest sights
That can be seen
Are strollers on The streets, I ween.

Imperfect Creation.

Someday, if you want subject for rumination, sit quietly for 15 or 30 minutes in some vantage point where you can see people passing by, in both directions, on a fairly busy street. Preferably choose a seat a couple of feet or three above the level of the pavement. You get a view of the passers-by from such a post that seems much more revealing than from the same level.

I have sometimes theorized to the effect that, after the nudists have had the right idea. That abandonment of artificial covering would, after the race became toughened and accustomed to it, be beneficial to health and morals, both.

But, after contemplating several hundred passers-by, as described, the other day, I think I understand why man—and woman—has such a determined predilection for clothing. Imagination working, it is not hard to vision the physical conformation of the average human under the modern styles of attire. And I shudder to think of the wholesale horror exposed if some geni made all the suits and dresses and hats and shoes and so forth suddenly disappear.

Slouching Or Striding Along.

Humans of all shapes and sizes seem to prefer either to slouch or to appear impressive by striding—strides usually unnaturally and ungracefully long.

Most of the slouchers, by the way, are masculine. Most of the excessive stride-takers are women.

If, however, the general ensemble you see is pathetically humorous, the facial expressions are still funnier. And the funniest of all are those who evidence, in the expression, that they consider themselves rather superior to the common herd. These who seem to silently say, "Notice how important, or intelligent or distinguished I am," are really absurd, sometimes.

Almost as funny as those whose faces are set in a constant grimace of disapproval. There's a lot of the latter, too.

And, now and then, there is a refreshing break in the parade.

When someone, man, woman, boy or girl, comes along in perfectly natural manner. No artificial bitsing here; on the train with the unfolding panorama of nature—trees, quiet streams, fields of growing corn and other crops, flowers in the woods and swamps and in the little yards about the homes, people working, the bright clouds floating against the blue sky, and that glorious sunset. I feel like a new person tonight.

Which reminds me of these lines, written by Winnifred Mott: "If from the hills we gain not strength, Or dignity, or self-control—If sunrise wake no reverence, No answering calm in the soul—If spring's recurring miracle Give us no sense of life renewed, And harvests bring no thought at all—Of Thine eternal plenitude—If flowers and birds have taught us not How good Thou art—how loving-kind, The reason, Father of us all, Must lie in us, Thy children blind.

For all of nature, everywhere, From tiny bud to stately tree, May teach us—if we will it so, May help us, if we will but see."

A Story In A Glimpse.

I caught a glimpse, on the street, of a picture that told a complete story. The girl had poverty written in every line. In the rather straggly hair, of dull, nondescript color. In the ill-fitting print dress that screamed aloud of the second hand. In the worn, scuffed, dusty old shoes. In the face, strangely acquainted with soap and water. She was leaning against the edge of a store window. And in the window was a display of smart little dresses, about the size that she would require. Really smart, they were, and ultra-modern in style.

And there was such a story of longing and desire in the pose of the girl's body and in the expression of her face, I was tempted to take her inside the store and buy a dress for her.

But then I thought it was hardly the sort of thing a strange man can do for a girl. I imagined what Having allowed herself to be guided by Britain's policy in not preventing the remilitarization of the Rhineland and thereafter permitting the conquest of the Spanish peninsula by a general in the service of France's worst enemies, Paris must now pay the price of her pusillanimity and assume arduous burdens far beyond her capacity. It could all have been prevented by taking a firm stand. But, as the Prime Minister of France said to me one day last year: Whenever we plan to take action to defend our national interests, there is a warning from London that if our independent action leads us into trouble with the dictators, we must not count on England's aid.

Suspicious Of Britain.

This leads one to suspect that Britain is in reality with the dictators, while pretending to be on the democratic side of the fence. And this suspicion is heightened by the fact that England has not as much as uttered a word of protest when Adolf Hitler recently announced plans to add 52 naval units to his brand-new navy. Hitler would not proceed to a naval building program without first having consulted London. In fact, one of the clauses of the naval accord drawn up between Hitler and Sir John Simon three years ago stipulates that if Germany increases her fleet beyond the limit of one-third of England's strength, she must first have the approval of London.

We read the newspapers, the communiques handed out after international diplomatic gatherings and on these we base our observations and prognostications of the future. I have come to the conclusion that we are wrong. The official statements are eyewash and camouflage. The real game is being played behind the scenes and a lot of conniving, plotting and intrigue is going on of which the world has no knowledge.

her folks might say, when she got home and didn't have any reasonable explanation for possession of the dress. So went along about my business.

But I do wish someone could give that girl a complete, new outfit, take her to a hairdresser and beauty parlor and let her see herself, for once, as she might be.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Tuesday, July 8, 1913.

"Cheered by thousands of Atlantans along a farewell parade route through the downtown section, the boys of the fifth regiment of the national guard of Georgia left Union station for the encampment at St. Simon's island, which will be in progress 10 days."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Sunday, July 8, 1888:

"Washington:—An order was today issued from the war department announcing that by authority of the President of the United States, the military reservation at Fort Pickens, Fla., located on the west end of Santa Rosa island, is modified and extended so as to include the whole of said Santa Rosa island."

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

AIDS TO LIFE.

Riding along on the train the other day, I noticed a man get up from his place in a car of friends and take a seat in another part of the car, where he would be alone.

That impressed me for the moment and then I went on reading. Later in the day I happened to be in conversation with this gentleman, and he said:

"This has been a very helpful day for me. I was completely worn out from continuous meetings and conferences for several days and nights. I had talked about everything to everybody until I was limp. I needed to get apart and rest, and nearly all day I have been sitting here; on the train watching the unfolding panorama of nature—trees, quiet streams, fields of growing corn and other crops, flowers in the woods and swamps and in the little yards about the homes, people working, the bright clouds floating against the blue sky, and that glorious sunset. I feel like a new person tonight."

Which reminds me of these lines, written by Winnifred Mott: "If from the hills we gain not strength, Or dignity, or self-control—If sunrise wake no reverence, No answering calm in the soul—If spring's recurring miracle Give us no sense of life renewed, And harvests bring no thought at all—Of Thine eternal plenitude—If flowers and birds have taught us not How good Thou art—how loving-kind, The reason, Father of us all, Must lie in us, Thy children blind.

For all of nature, everywhere, From tiny bud to stately tree, May teach us—if we will it so, May help us, if we will but see."

Norway Climate.

Norway will welcome many Americans this summer as they journey to the great exhibition at Oslo, and many will carry furs for the journey, which is what one made the mistake of doing last summer. Because Norway is in the same latitude as Alaska and goes north beyond the Arctic circle, it was thought that it must be cool even in summer, yet even in January it is not really cold. The January temperature of Hammerfest, Norway—"farther north" city, indeed, the most northerly city in the world, is the same as that of Berlin or Bucharest, from one to nearly two thousand miles farther south. Reason—the Gulf stream.

One Word More It Is Unfair To Bait a Field for Doves and Invite Friends to Shoot Them

By RALPH MCGILL.

There were many number of people in our town yesterday who do not care for moving pictures depicting newspaper life and work. They were newspaper people.

At one hotel the publishers met. At another the baseball writers met. In the evening they all met together at the all-star baseball game, the publishers in reserved boxes, the baseball writers in their press box, or cage.

Each group knew the fallacy of the movie newspaperman, publisher and baseball writer alike. The movie newspaperman carried a pint of gin in his pocket and keeps a quart in his desk. He is in love with a blonde who writes for the paper. He remains in a more or less beatific state with the aid of his gin. He finally gets fired for drinking, but while in a maudlin state at some saloon happens upon THE story and gets back his job with a raise. That's the movie formula.

There is a certain freedom about newspaper life and there ought to be. As soon as they legislate or regiment that freedom, liberty of action, and unrestrainedness out of the business they will legislate it out of their columns.

But, it does seem that most anyone ought to know that no newspaperman can come in and swing his pen while seated at his desk. Or that he will happen on a good story while asleep at some saloon table.

The greatest myth of all, of course, is that a newspaperman writes better while soused. There never was one who could do this. Most of the old myths about a great story written by some plastered reporter can be traced down to some sober friend who wrote the story and filed it on the wire or sent it to the office with the soused reporter's name signed to it.

Time was when there were reporters who went off on assignments and remained in a state of pleasant coma. Their friends wrote their stories and helped them on and off trains. Most of this type reformed after an earnest plea from their kidneys and liver. They produced one good yarn. It concerns the reporter who was supposed to be covering a fight, but who was asleep. His friends, without consulting one another, undertook to cover for him and some five or six stories, each signed with the sleeping reporter's name, went on the wire. The editor wired back to his reporter: "Send no more. Five stories received. The third one seems to be best."

One True Story When I was in Berlin last February for the Hitler reichstag meeting, I heard a true story with a true ending in which the hero did not marry the blonde reporter and did not get a raise.

There was a reporter in Berlin for a press association. One late afternoon he went to a house, touring the beer and wine halls. He woke up next morning in his hotel. He felt perfectly awful and his tongue felt as if the Chinese army had marched across it in its sock feet.

He shaved with shaking hands, bathed and dressed. When he descended the steps to the lobby he discovered most of his compatriots.

He felt a sense of alarm but went on down and asked what was up. He learned that during the late afternoon and night a purge had been started in the Nazi army and government group, and the fun had gone on all night.

"Well," he said, "tell me about it. I guess I will be fired, but I will go ahead and write a resume of it."

They told him and he went to the cable company and filed a concise, thorough story and went back to his hotel. Five hours later he got word of his congratulations from his office in America, saying he had beat the entire world on the yarn.

The censor had They found out what had happened.

During the night the Nazis had clamped on the lid of censorship. As the copy came in it was passed through a hook and held. The last piece of copy which came in was that of the reporter who had slept through the entire show.

A moment after he filed his late story, the censorship was lifted. The cable operator reached for the copy, and the very first story he sent was that of the reporter who had missed the show. It was concise, thorough, and the others, working hard, had filed in "takes" and in paragraphs. Their stories were not nearly so good. They followed his.

The last chapter of the story was that the reporter was so overjoyed with his bonus and his luck that he went off on another tour of the beer halls and this time he went on a tour lasting two weeks when he got back to his office he was fired. That was that.

There is no doubt at all that booze will fill the head with ideas that seem magnificent. Most any reporter can tell of perfectly treasured ideas which developed after the sixth or seventh beer or highball.

The trouble is, most of them wash out in the next morning's shower and appear what they really are—very dull, empty ideas.

The best stories always have been written by men who were out of their cups, not in them, at the time of the writing.

At the same time, there is a certain freedom and a very real fraternity about the newspaper business which the business needs to keep its columns bright.

The baseball writers talked a lot at the meeting. The very first thing one of them talked about was a nine-month-old baby. Indeed, the opening business session was delayed by an argument among the fathers present.

I looked carefully at their pockets. Not one bulged with a bottle of gin.

A lady in Flint, Michigan, chides me gently, wittily and charmingly for having written the following paragraph: "Being kind to prowling cats that kill birds is going too far. We electrocute murderers to save innocent people."

While half the world is devouring the other half, it does seem unfair to single out cats for condemnation; but they cannot be judged as the wolf, for they are not a part of nature's scheme. The charge against them is that they disturb the balance of nature, as imported insect pests do.

Our birds have many natural enemies, but survived in spite of them till "civilized" man came, with his lust for killing and his domesticated cats.

The cats have an unfair advantage. They are fed and sheltered. They need not fight for survival in the wilds. Yet they are turned loose to prey upon song birds and ground birds which aren't protected. And their hunting is made easier by the fact that many birds prefer living near the habitation of man.

Thus man unconsciously entices the birds, which charm and serve him, and then turns loose an extra and unnatural enemy to destroy them.

There is no point in criticizing the kill-or-be-killed scheme of nature, for it is necessary and unaffected by criticism.

If the most prolific fish were not preyed upon they would soon fill the ocean. If prolific animals such as rabbits, were not preyed upon, they would soon fill the earth and devour all green stuff and then starve—as they did on that island off the coast of California.

Nature keeps a balance by disregarding individuals and being fair to each species. When man disturbs the balance, he causes unfairness and extermination.

The only rule we have concerning the taking of life is the natural rule of necessity—the rule justified by reason, fair play and the need to survive.

Man must kill the insects, serpents and wild beasts that would destroy him. He may kill to get food. But the killing of harmless birds not needed as food is not only wanton slaughter but a dangerous destruction of nature's balance, for birds alone hold in check the insects that are man's most dangerous enemy.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"I have forgot much, Cynara! gone with the wind, Flung roses, roses riotously with the throng, Dancing to put thy pale, lost lilies out of mind..."

Editor Chapman, of the Roanoke Times, thinks Tallulah Bankhead would have been a better choice than Norma Shearer for the part of Scarlett in "Gone With the Wind." He writes of "the coming strain on the sensitive ears of southern motion picture audiences as they listen to the Hollywood conception of a southern accent on the lips of lovely Miss Shearer." But he refuses to worry, and so do we. Among other bitternesses gone with the wind as a result of the national reading of "Gone With the Wind" is the over-subjective approach to things dealing with the Civil War and the differences between north and south. We, for one, give Miss Mitchell credit for making possible last week's joint reunion at Gettysburg, and the refreshingly objective interest taken in the affair and in the retelling of the battle story. Thanks to her great book, people are beginning to feel historical rather than competitive about the Civil War.

Oliver L. Steele, of Birmingham, wonders why we worry about people who say "different than," and pronounce the "t" in "often" when there is at large today a great number of more gravely erring ones who sound the "p" in "comp-troller," and pronounce the "m" like "m" rather than "n."

But we do not choose to be diverted from the sayers of "different than." The longer we live and study them the more certain we are that, literate though they may be, they are wrong as wrong can be. The new Merriam-Webster dictionary confirms what the older dictionaries say, namely, that the only two expressions are "different from" and "different to," with the latter reserved for Brits. What interests us in "different than" and "often" is that they are mistakes not of the uneducated but of the educated and that they are made sometimes with an actual sense of being more, not less, correct than others. Just as some women automobile drivers conscientiously veer to the left before turning right and to the right before turning left.

Maybe it won't but if spending-lending should turn out to be the only way of maintaining prosperity in a machine age there would be not only the problem of paying for it out of current earnings but the even greater problem of saving democracy against it. For the power to dispense billions in government money is a power most truly to destroy democracy. It is the power to buy an electorate. It is the power to maintain one's self indefinitely in office. It is the power to make a mockery of local government. It is the power to be as much a dictator and have as synthetically complete a public support as Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin.

Nothing is more important, it seems to me, to collect, than that, as recovery seems to be coming on, more Americans determine whether it does indeed result from federal spending and lending and

DELEGATES UNABLE TO FIND SOLUTION FOR JEWS' PROBLEM

Idealistic Words Flow But No Practical Suggestions Are Offered.

EVIAN-LES-BAINS, France, July 7.—(AP)—The intergovernmental committee attempting to solve the acute problem of thousands of racial and political refugees heard warm words of idealism today, but few encouraging practical suggestions from delegates of seven nations who addressed it.

The conference elected Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States delegation, to the presidency in tribute to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who called it into session.

Organizing its work, it voted to hold its third public session Saturday morning when further statements of policy will be presented by national delegations, and approved appointment of two subcommittees.

Little Progress Made.
One subcommittee, headed by T. W. White, of Australia, will deal with private refugee organizations; the other, to be directed by Michael Hansson, of Norway, will be a technical group to supervise a compilation of immigration laws and practices of governments represented at the conference.

Except for this, the committee made little progress toward solution of its problem. The apparent stumbling block still was the necessity of getting some country to receive refugees. The public addresses left little doubt most nations were indisposed to offer havens.

Palestine Offers No Aid.
The most encouraging word was from Brazil whose delegate, Helio Lobo, said the state of Sao Paulo "might" be in a position to accept an unspecified number of agricultural workers.

It was pointed out, however, that most of the German and Austrian refugees were city dwellers. Even Palestine seemed to close tighter before Jewish refugees. A communication to the committee from the Arab national committee there said a delegation was en route here to argue against any increase in the Jewish population in the Holy Land.

SALES TAX FOUGHT BY HUGH HOWELL
LEARY, Ga., July 7.—(AP)—Hugh Howell, candidate for Governor, shook his fist at sales tax proponents today and declared he would fight such a levy "because it is a tax on poverty instead of a tax on wealth."

He said a sales tax follows a citizen "from the cradle to the grave."
"This is no time in Georgia to take another dollar out of the salary checks of our workmen or lay any additional burdens of taxes on the backs of our already overtaxed people."

"You know and I know that a general sales tax would be equivalent to a wage and salary reduction for a multitude of Georgians. By increasing the prices of things they must buy, it would cut down their incomes and pile up their burdens."

Howell pointed out a sales tax usually starts off at one or two per cent, "but each time the politicians need more money of politics to keep themselves in office they put on another one per cent, and another and another, just like they did the gasoline tax."

Careers for Women Found Divorce Factor

Judge Virlyn B. Moore Has Heard Record Number of Cases Here.

By ALBON B. HAILEY.
The old story of "career versus a home" is recurring more and more in Fulton divorce court, Superior Judge Virlyn B. Moore, who probably has heard more divorces than any judge in Georgia, said yesterday.

Judge Moore yesterday disposed of 89 uncontested divorce cases in superior court, hearing the complaints of husbands and wives who have come to the parting of ways.

"The whole outlook on the institution of marriage has been changed in recent years by women in business," Judge Moore commented, when asked for his explanation of the rush in the divorce court. Judge Moore has heard 210 divorce cases in the last three days and has approximately 134 more scheduled for today.

Husbands' Families.
"Recently, women are complaining more and more about having to support not only their husbands, but their husbands' families as well," the jurist said.

"The greatest trouble seems to come when the wife makes more money than the husband. But it seems natural because that sense of possession, of caring for the man, has been taken away from the man," Judge Moore said.

"It used to be that when a woman could catch a man she would cling to him," he added. "But it's not that way now. Women are more independent and won't put up with the things they once would."

Roman Precedent.
Judge Moore recalled that women in the days when Rome was at its height were given wider privileges than they had ever received previously.

"Divorces soon were on the increase and some speaker said that if women ever were given such freedom again it would be the damnation of civilization," Judge Moore said.

He commented that he was not certain whether there had been any "unusual" increases in the number of divorces recently.

The judge, who begins his day early on his farm near Bolton, has tried more than 7,500 divorce cases during his 12 years on the bench. He estimates this is more than any other Georgia jurist has tried.

Before coming to the superior court bench, Judge Moore tends to the most important of his farm tasks—milking the cow. And when the day's business is over, he goes out to his farm and dons his coveralls for a repeat performance.

On the bench, Judge Moore remains calm and at ease while wives tell their woes and husbands explain "she was cold and indifferent." Often he interrupts the attorney before sending the divorce petition to the jury.

preliminary studies in Kentucky during recent months that the Barkley vote has remained remarkably stable. An early survey reported April 10 showed Barkley leading two to one at that time. Another check-up, reported May 15, found little change in sentiment, with 65 per cent for the New Deal senator, and 35 per cent for Chandler.

President Roosevelt's own popularity in the state, as measured by the Institute, is down six points since the 1936 election. He received 59 per cent of the major party vote in Kentucky that year. Today 53 per cent of Kentucky voters say they are for him. The state has never been as strongly for Roosevelt as others in the south and southwest. In fact, only 13 states throughout the nation cast a smaller vote for Roosevelt than Kentucky did in the 1936 election.

An early riser, Judge Virlyn B. Moore dons coveralls and milks his cows on his Bolton farm while the majority of his "divorce court clients" are still tossing in bed.

His cows now grazing contentedly, Judge Moore sits on his bench in Fulton county superior court and listens intently as discontented wives and husbands "talk about each other."

F. D. R. Held Seeking Own Answer To Major Questions in Long Tour

Places More Trust in First-Hand Observation, Correspondent Says; Third Term Possibility May Be Settled in Course of Wanderings Across the Nation.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.
WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—For the second time in less than 10 months, President Roosevelt sets out tonight on a transcontinental swing on which great events for himself, for his party and for the nation may depend.

There are two major political questions which dominate the 1938-40 political scene. They are: Whether Roosevelt popularity has waxed or waned since his sweep to re-election in 1936; and whether he will seek a third term to carry forward the New Deal program to which he freshly nailed his flag in his radio chat two weeks ago.

New light may be thrown on both questions by results of this Roosevelt trip.

Now, as in September, 1937, when he left Hyde Park on a swing to the northwest, the President appears to be seeking first of all his own answer to the question of his popularity and the trend of public opinion on his national leadership. He always has indicated more trust in his own first-hand observation to gauge such trends than in straw-vote samples, or the reports of political henchmen.

Crowd Reaction.
Franklin Roosevelt seems to find his answer in the faces of the crowds of ordinary folk who wait for him at every brief stop on such trips. He hears it in the tone of crowd response to his sallies; and has never failed to risk decisions of major importance to himself, his party or the nation on the accuracy of his judgment of public reaction.

That was strikingly demonstrated in 1937. Then, as now, he went to the country after a session of congress that seethed with party revolt against his leadership. The senate fight over the court bill raised signals of party disintegration that are still flying. His hopes then of rounding out his New Deal program by 1940 were menaced, his national prestige threatened.

Prove Program.
On that 1937 trip, Mr. Roosevelt satisfied himself that the court bill fight had little effect on his standing with the voting public. He returned here to call a reluctant congress back to work on unfinished tasks he had set it. Much of that Roosevelt program has now been driven through. The rest is already publicly docketed by Roosevelt pronouncements for the next congress, now in process of election.

That is the situation as the President turns westward across the country again, this time through the middlewest, south, southwest, Rocky Mountain states and California, to take a hand in Democratic primary contests, the outcome of which could go far to indicate whether he is still master in his own political house. In some of the senatorial nomination fights ahead of him, he is pitting his personal hold on Democratic voters against state organization machinery. That is so in Oklahoma, in Kentucky. He is also invading Texas, from which came much of the party opposition to his leadership almost from its beginnings, what he reads in the faces of the crowds that assemble to greet him will go farthest in determining his course in 1940.

1940 Delegations.
Victory for any primary candidate for whom the President intercedes would certainly enhance Roosevelt prestige within the party. It would clearly indicate strong Roosevelt influence in those states on the selection of Democratic national convention delegations for 1940.

Yet, in the judgment of political observers who have watched Franklin Roosevelt's political climb to the presidency almost from its beginnings, what he reads in the faces of the crowds that assemble to greet him will go farthest in determining his course in 1940.

President Expected To Seek Own Answer to Popularity Question.

lanta time, and at Bowling Green about 9:50 p. m., these two speeches will be broadcast locally.

In speeches later in Oklahoma and California, political analysts believe the President will, at least, make gestures of friendship for Senators Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, and McAdoo, Democrat, California.

The address at Barnesville will be delivered at the dedication of a rural electrification project. It will follow a visit to Athens, where Mr. Roosevelt will receive an honorary degree at the Georgia University in August, but some persons, including New Deal Governor Rivers, predicted he would steer away from politics in his speech of acceptance.

Observers, therefore, regarded it as politically significant when Mr. Roosevelt scheduled a second Georgia address for the same day. Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, and Governor Rivers had been invited to join the six-member delegation for the conference with the President, but they telegraphed regrets and told Mr. Roosevelt by wire they hoped he would accept the Barnesville invitation.

George 'Not Contacted.'
White House aides explained the conference was arranged by Harle Branch, a Georgian and second assistant postmaster general. They ducked reporters' questions about whether Senator George had been invited, but Harvey Kennedy, a delegation member, said later, "Senator George was not contacted."

Camp, who went to Atlanta from Fairburn, Ga., 40 miles or more from Barnesville, interrupted his campaign to deliver the Electric Co-operative's invitation. He said the Georgians did not discuss politics with the President.

The formal invitation was addressed to Mr. Roosevelt as "our neighbor and friend," and added: "If the south is to progress, if our wasted and neglected resources of land and water are to be reclaimed, if our farmers are to secure cheaper fertilizer, our people cheaper power and our laboring man a fair wage, and if the living conditions of Georgians are

F. D. R. GETS 2 VOTES FOR TENNESSEE POST
NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 7.—(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated and got two votes today for Van Buren county election commissioner.

The comic opera incident at the state election board meeting resulted from bickering between Robert Johnson, Republican friend to Governor Gordon Browning, and Abe Waldauer, anti-Browning Democrat.

There was a Democratic vacancy on the Van Buren commission and Lee McCoy was nominated by the Browning faction.

"I don't know Lee McCoy," Waldauer said. "I want to know who I am voting for. I nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt for this vacancy."

"He's too busy meddling in primaries," Johnson interjected. "He wouldn't have time to function."

to be improved, then Georgia and the south must follow your splendid leadership."
"Realizing this to be true, we invite you to speak on any subject you may deem of interest to Georgians."

$132,000 REA Project.
The REA project, sponsored by the Lamar Electric Membership Corporation, involved a government loan of $132,000.

The Georgia delegation included Camp, Kennedy, attorney for the project; H. L. Smith, of Barnesville, project president; E. C. Miller, of Barnesville, project director; Judge Earl Camp, of Dublin, and Judge Waldo DeLoache, of Moultrie, former state director of the Federal Housing Administration.

John Carmody, rural electrification administrator, accompanied the group to the White House.

Part of the President's time today was devoted to the spending-lending program.

Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, visited Mr. Roosevelt and came out with a brief case bulging with a list of approved PWA projects. He said he would "keep 'em out in the next two or three days."

Bailey Conference.
Governor Carl Bailey, of Arkansas, visited the executive offices and said the President and he had discussed, hurriedly, economic conditions of the south and that he had told Mr. Roosevelt "he was the first President to recognize the south politically and economically to the rest of the nation."

The President began the day by naming two federal district judges, a United States attorney, three United States marshals and two state directors for the national emergency council.

He appointed also the three members of a maritime labor board authorized at the last congressional session. Those selected are Robert W. Bruere, of New York; Louis Bloch, of California, and Claude E. Seehorn, of Colorado.

In addition to the members of the White House staff who usually accompany him, Mr. Roosevelt arranged for D. Basil O'Connor, of New York, his former law partner, to make the trip. O'Connor is a brother of Representative O'Connor, Democrat, New York, who helped pigeon-hole the President's government reorganization bill at the recent session of congress.

Charles West, former under-secretary of the interior, will ride as far as Cincinnati. L. W. Robert

GROUP DEMANDS ARMS EMBARGO

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—A rally which heard the first of Japan condemn that nation's aggression in China tonight endorsed a resolution calling upon President Roosevelt to declare an arms embargo against the Tokyo government.

The meeting, sponsored by the China rally committee to commemorate the first anniversary of the Sino-Japanese conflict, attracted approximately 2,000 persons to Madison Square park.

Miss Marie Matsui, Japanese writer and lecturer, appealed for an American boycott of Japanese goods.

Peter Huyn, of the Korean Society to Aid China, asserted Japan had crushed freedom, culture and civilization in its country and predicted Koreans would carry on their resistance "until Japanese imperialist ambitions are destroyed."

U. S. IS ACCUSED IN WAR IN EAST

ROME, July 7.—(AP)—The authoritative Fascist writer, Virginia Gayda, today accused the United States, Great Britain and France of responsibility for continuation of the Chinese-Japanese war.

"Japan finds herself faced with the diplomatic opposition of the United States, Great Britain and France," she wrote, "which by encouraging a still disorganized and badly armed China to stupid resistance, have been responsible for open, armed conflict which for a year has soaked Chinese territory in blood."

tering this great trust in the interest of the people. . . .

(2) An announcement from James Lawrence Fly, TVA general counsel, that the combined legal talent of the United States Department of Justice and the TVA will be called on to oppose Dr. Morgan in his efforts to have the President's ouster order declared illegal and void.

General Approach.
The general approach to these problems is one of co-operation between the TVA and Justice Department," Fly said. "We'll work out details of the co-operation from time to time."

Dr. Morgan filed a chancery court suit here yesterday challenging President Roosevelt's authority to remove him. He asked back salary of $2,916.66 since his removal last March 22 and requested a decree to force TVA Directors Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal to recognize him as a fellow director and TVA chairman.

His position was that he could be removed from office only by a concurrent vote of the house and senate.

Morgan Ousted.
President Roosevelt ousted him for making "grave and libelous" charges against his fellow directors and for "refusing to submit" to the President's demands for facts to support the accusations.

There was a possibility the TVA might petition the state court to transfer the suit to district federal court.

Chairman Donahay declared the investigation precipitated by Dr. Morgan would be a "constructive one." The committee will meet here Monday and then make a tour of the Tennessee valley to inspect TVA properties.

Donahay said the committee would investigate:
(1) The administration of the TVA pertaining to matters of policy, allocations, appropriations, functions and interferences.

Financial Structure.
(2) Whether financial loss has been caused to citizens or municipalities through the purchase of electric power from the TVA, or whether extravagance or mismanagement on the part of the board or any of its subsidiaries has dissipated funds. . . .

(3) Whether or not sodium nitrate can be produced by power plants of the TVA and sold to the farmers of the nation at a cost less than the present domestic market prices of imported sodium nitrate.

(4) Whether, by accounting methods and cost charges applicable to private industry, the electric rates of the Authority provide an honest, legitimate "yardstick" of rates for private industry.

CHATTANOOGA ELECTRIC SEEKS POWER SYSTEM
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 7.—(AP)—L. J. Wilhoite, acting chairman of the Chattanooga Electric Power Board, said today the board had offered the Tennessee Electric Power Company $8,200,000 for its Chattanooga distribution system and the transmission lines serving it.

He said the board also had proposed to purchase part of its generating system but the price did not cover this.

Jr., secretary of the Democratic committee, was added to the party at the last minute.

Three persons connected with the Warm Springs, Ga., Infantile Paralysis Foundation will join the presidential special at Pueblo, Col., Tuesday. They are Keith Morgan, George Allen and Thomas Rigley.

CANDIDATES BUSY MAKING SPEECHES WHO'S PAYING COST? REPUBLICAN ASKS

George Is Silent on Roosevelt's Plans to Deliver Address in Georgia.

Georgia's candidates for senator and governor made or planned speeches yesterday.

Senator George, incumbent, was at his Dooley county farm, and made no comment on President Roosevelt's plan for a Georgia speech, as his campaign headquarters here announced the senator had urged federal authorities to allocate funds for increasing facilities of the Veterans' hospital in Atlanta and construction of an additional hospital in central or south Georgia.

Former Governor Talmadge, also seeking George's post, meanwhile carried his campaign to Georgia young people with a plea for their vote on his plank of enlarging the Civilian Conservation Corps camps into "model institutions."

Talmadge spoke at Sylvestor, urging all Georgia youth to cast their first vote "for one in whom you have confidence."

William G. McRae, a fourth senatorial candidate, will make his next speech July 15 at Ocala.

Few Days in Georgia.
Camp's presence at the White House today gave new support to speculation he might receive outright New Deal support, possibly when the President speaks at Barnesville. The President is slated to spend a few days at Warm Springs "other home" after receiving his university degree. He will come to Georgia at the end of a swing across the country and through the Panama canal.

Details of the Barnesville program will await return of H. L. Smith, of Barnesville, president of the REA project, and Harvey Kennedy, attorney for the project. The ceremony will be held in the new memorial stadium built with WPA aid, at Gordon College. It seats some 2,000. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to spend a few days at Barnesville and thence to Warm Springs.

Camp is scheduled to return to south Georgia Saturday for an address at 3 p. m., central standard time. The talk is to be broadcast by radio station WSB.

George's Next Talk.
Senator George's next talk was listed for July 19, at a rally for all candidates in the state's major races at Griffin.

Talmadge will speak today at the CCC camp at Margret on the Fannin-Union county line; tomorrow at Covington, and then will make a swing through middle and south Georgia.

Hugh Howell pushed his campaign for governor with a speech yesterday at Leary, where he declared steadfast opposition to a sales tax for Georgia. The Atlanta attorney said a sales tax affected every person "from the cradle to the grave" and was "a tax on poverty instead of a tax on wealth."

John J. Mangham will speak at 7 o'clock tonight over WSB in behalf of his gubernatorial candidacy. Robert Wood, of Athens, engaged his campaign for the governorship with opening of Atlanta headquarters.

Governor Rivers, who has not opened his campaign for re-election, was scheduled for an address at Fort Mountain today at 4 p. m. in celebration of work resumption at the state park between Chatsworth and Ellijah and re-establishment of a CCC camp at the park.

Halleck Demands to Know Whether Trip Financed by 'Treasury' or Democrats.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—Representative Halleck, Republican, Indiana, expressed hope tonight President Roosevelt would disclose during his transcontinental trip whether the federal treasury or the Democratic national committee was paying the cost of the tour.

In a statement distributed to the press by the Republican national committee, Halleck added:

"Mr. Roosevelt also might confide to the country the useful public purpose under government direction" to which his secretary last March said he would devote the profits from the syndication of his newspaper articles. We have been waiting now four months for that information.

"Still more important, the entire country would like to hear exactly what Mr. Roosevelt proposes to do, besides spending money, to bring about a sound, lasting economic recovery and to put the 13,000,000 unemployed back to work in private industry."

The Indiana Republican said the President's promised "purge" of New Deal foes within the Democratic party already had suffered a partial collapse.

"The McNutt machine in Indiana refused to play the President's little political game," he continued, "and instead has decided to promote the high commissioner's 1940 presidential aspirations by supporting Senator Van Nuys for re-election. It is no wonder Mr. Roosevelt referred all inquiries about Indiana to astrologers, for the action of the McNutt machine must have been galling to his pride."

ROOSEVELT PLANS BARNESVILLE TALK

the state are expecting invitations to Warm Springs for conferences during the time the President is there. The motions are mixed.

Invitations to be present on the speakers' stand the day of the address at Barnesville also will be extended. At no time has Senator George been contacted.

Pressure Expected.
Pressure will be put on the President by various political forces urging that he remain out of the senate race in Georgia. That the President is unlikely to accept this advice is the most logical deduction. He already has announced to the nation his intention to campaign in behalf of "liberals" friendly to his cause.

The fightover walkers, and they are many, will be busy until the President arrives. By the time August 11 is at hand they hope to have learned how. They hope the President will put a political pistol to their heads.

Meanwhile, there will be a frantic effort to obtain the reaction of the voting Georgian to the President's determination to take a part in the primary.

Senator George's headquarters said it believed opinion would crystallize against such action. The others were silent.

CRACKER POWER TRAMPLES ALL-STARS, 14 TO 4

HERE ARE SCENES AS SOUTHERN LEAGUE ALL-STAR GAME WAS INAUGURATED LAST NIGHT AT PONCE DE LEON PARK

Luman Harris Lost for Two Weeks

Manager Paul Richards yesterday brought the bad news back from Memphis with him. Luman Harris, one of the club's most dependable pitchers, will be lost to the club for two weeks because of an attack of tonsillitis.

"Harris will spend the next ten days in an Atlanta hospital," Richards said.

The Cracker manager managed a grin as he spoke of the club's tough luck.

"I don't know what else can happen to us," he said.

"I got hit on my hand again but luckily it was a glancing blow. I was holding my hand up against my chest protector and a foul ball bounced off the ground and hit it."

The Crackers really are up against it for pitchers now, what with Tom Sunkel troubled with a bad tooth; Larry Miller and Bill Beckman suffering from sinus trouble, and Leo Moon being unable to pitch winning ball.

The club's spirit is still good, however, in the face of all sorts of setbacks. Both Russ Peters and Cecil Dunn have sore arms.

Just who will be able to pitch in the series, besides Bob Durham, remains a question.

Tom Sunkel To Miss Chattanooga Series.

Tom Sunkel, so far Atlanta's most dependable pitcher, will not make the trip to Chattanooga today because of an infected tooth, believed to be the cause of his sore arm. He will be treated here.

LEAGUE WRITERS ELECT RUSSELL

Representatives from seven of the eight Southern association cities organized yesterday the Southern Association of Baseball Writers and dedicated the organization to promoting the "square deal" in baseball.

Only Memphis failed to have representatives at the organization meeting.

The gathering of so many sports editors and baseball writers set a record in Southern league baseball history. The writers killed two birds with one stone. They were here to organize their association and "cover" the Southern league's first annual All-Star game.

Fred Russell, sports editor of the Nashville Banner, was named president of the new group which heretofore had existed only on an informal basis.

Zipp Newman, sports editor of the Birmingham News, was elected vice president and Bob Phillips, sports editor of the Birmingham Age-Herald, was made secretary and treasurer.

DIRECTORS NAMED.

Four directors, who with the officers form the executive committee, were Ed Danforth, Atlanta sports editor; Bill Keefe, sports editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune; Fred Digby, sports editor of the New Orleans Item-Tribune, and Allen Tilden, sports editor of the Little Rock Ark.) Gazette.

It was decided to admit to membership any member of the sports departments of papers in the league cities at the recommendation of sports editors. Each paper will have only one vote. There will be another meeting at New Orleans at the same time the minor league meeting is held the first week in December. The next annual meeting will be held at the time of the All-Star game in the city where that contest is played.

The organization, adopting a constitution and by-laws, will seek to simplify scoring rules and make them uniform, and will seek better press box facilities.

The organization will not try to run the league's business.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Honorary members of the association were named. They included Ralph McGill, Jimmy Burns, Kenneth Gregory and W. T. Foster.

A committee on playing rules included Wirt Gammon, Pie Du-four and Ben Epstein. An auditing committee embraced Jack Troy, John Putnam and Raymond Johnson.

A full list of representatives included: Bill Keefe, Pie Du-four and Fred Digby, New Orleans.

Wirt Gammon, H. L. Nations and E. T. Bales, Chattanooga.

Ben Epstein and Allen Tilden, Little Rock.

Zipp Newman, Bob Phillips, Bob Putnam and Henry Vance, Birmingham.

Fred Russell and Raymond Johnson, Nashville.

Ed Danforth, Morgan Blake, Guy Butler and Jack Troy, Atlanta.

Paul Richards' Atlanta Crackers stole the show by defeating the Southern league All-Stars, 14-4, last night at Ponce de Leon park, but nevertheless, the annual game was inaugurated with great pomp and ceremony. Above left, Bill Crouch, Nashville pitcher who started the game for the All-Stars, is shown being congratulated by Major Trammell Scott, president of the league, on his selection to the team. Top center photo shows, left to right, Colonel Bob Jones, Freddie Russell, newly elected president of the Southern Association Baseball Writers, and Governor E. D. Rivers at a banquet before the game yesterday afternoon. Top right, Doc Prothro, left, manager of the All-Stars, and Paul Richards are shaking hands before the game. Center photo shows Showman Joe Engel in his "crying cage," especially constructed for him by the writers. At the bottom, Engel is shown at the microphone at the ceremonies before the game. Major Scott is shown with the All-Star team.

The newly formed Southern Association of Baseball Writers put their heads together yesterday and accomplished something worth while right off the bat, so to speak.

They segregated Joe Engel.

The writers, who are a canny lot, were very nice to the Baron when he arrived. They invited him up to their refreshment room and otherwise greeted him very warmly.

They had Engel chuckling. "This is the first time in my life I ever got anything from the sports writers."

"I'll have to tell Rogers (Hornsby) about it and when he gets a good tip (on the fifth at Bainbridge) he may pass it on."

Joe was very expansive. A sunflower was dull in comparison with the way his face lit up as the boys kidded and cajoled him.

But it was only the big build-up.

When the writers gathered for their dinner later on, Engel was quick to sense the fact they had dug a conversational pitfall and covered it expertly.

Engel was not permitted to sit with the writers at the dinner.

There was a special table for Engel, set apart from the others, and was labeled "Engel's Crying Cage."

It got Joe, at first, but you can't keep Engel down, of course.

He sat over there by himself and heckled the writers. "I was reluctant to come to this dinner, at first," he said.

"I wasn't so sure about the surroundings. But you fellows have fixed it up for Engel to be in good company."

The banquet room on the roof garden of the Ansley was very attractively arranged. The table was laid out in the form of a diamond, with imitation grass, bases, a

Crackers Triumph Over All-Star Team

By JACK TROY.

With a gala and colorful crowd of 15,045 providing a perfect setting, the league-leading Atlanta Crackers won a smashing 14-to-4 victory in the Southern league's first All-Star game last night at Ponce de Leon park.

Nashville's ace pitcher, Bill Crouch, was the only moundman the Crackers spared as they staged a thunderous batting attack and capitalized on All-Star errors to put Doc Prothro's hand-picked nine to rout.

Cubs Open 19-Game Home Stand Today With Fading Reds

CHICAGO HOPES TO END STREAK OF HOME LOSSES

Pennant Depends on Hitting of Herman, Hack, Martnett.

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs, a team which once was "hot" at home but of late has suffered outbreaks of cold chills in its own ballparks, open a long home stand tomorrow which likely will make or break their National league pennant chances.

The Cincinnati Reds call at Wrigley field to open a 19-game home stay for the Chicagoans, who've looked like anything but a championship club on their home diamond this year. Once upon a time, however, the Cubs were almost invincible at home and under Manager Charlie Grimm on down they feel they'll be back in the thick of the flag fight when they take to the road late this month.

Back in 1935 the Cubs won the pennant with a 21-game winning streak, and a large majority of those victories came at Wrigley field. This year, while playing better than .600 ball on the road, the Cubs, during the first half of the season, weren't even a .500 club at home, winning 15 and losing 16.

"We're certain to start clicking soon in our own park," said Grimm.

DUNN IMPROVES.

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—(AP)—Improvement was noted today in the condition of Jack Dunn, British ice skating star, who became critically ill with a streptococcus infection while preparing for his film debut.

pitcher's mound and home plate. Off to one side there was the visitors' dugout and a press box. Joe Engel's "crying room" completed the scenic effects.

OPTIMISM RAMPANT.

Atlanta was host yesterday to the finest gathering of sports editors and baseball writers in Southern league history. Only one town was not represented at the writers' organization meeting. That town was Memphis.

Other league towns had as many as three and four sports-writing representatives. Birmingham topped the list with four. Chattanooga and New Orleans had three each.

Optimism was rampant among the writers regarding the chances of their respective teams to win the pennant.

Fletcher Sweet, of Knoxville, was the most optimistic. "Just wait until the Smokies get started," he declared.

At that, the Smokies aren't buried in the cellar. There isn't so much difference between last and first place that a good winning streak can't change the complexion of things considerably in 10 days' time.

The Little Rock delegation (Ben Epstein and Allen Tilden) likes the Pebbles' chances to repeat.

The boys from Birmingham (Zipp Newman, Bob Phillips, John Putnam and Henry Vance) will string along with the Barons.

Chattanooga's representatives (Wirt Gammon, E. T. Bales and H. L. Nations) favor the Hornsby entry. The gentlemen from New Orleans (Bill Keefe, Fred Digby and Pie DuFour) were not very expressive, but they let it be known the Pelicans are still in the league.

And the Nashville duo (Fred Russell and Raymond Johnson) bent in an ear and added a voice in behalf of the Vols.

This left it up to the Atlanta writers, who simply pointed to the standings and let it go at that.

The managers and other league representatives remained uncommunicative about pennant possibilities. They used to speak out about it, but the race is so close none seems willing to crawl out on a limb.

BRANDS PAYS FIRST VISIT.

Edgar Brands, who covers all important events concerning baseball for The Sporting News, paid his first visit to Atlanta yesterday.

He came here for the writers' organization meeting and the All-Star game.

The Southern league's first game of this kind has attracted wide interest.

The veteran Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, dropped in "to do a little personal scouting."

The lobby of the Ansley had all the atmosphere of a baseball convention all during the day. Joe Engel, Charley Dessen, Jimmy Hamilton, Doc Prothro and Larry Gilbert were the center of baseball discussions.

Quinn had the floor a lot of the time, too. He had a right to be expansive. The National league finally had won again over the American league.

"It's as I contended all along," Quinn declared. "Those American leaguers can't hit real curve-ball pitching."

COACH ALEX VISITS.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, was present at the writers' luncheon.

The talk naturally switched to football and Bill Keefe insisted Buddy Banker, Tulane's newest ball-carrying sensation, is better than his illustrious brother, Billy. "It's all right with me," Coach Alex said. "I'm just glad we don't have to play them."

Coach Alex had to answer a lot of questions about Tech's prospects. He had one answer—"Pretty fair."

The Jackets' veteran leader revealed that Duke must be expecting a real club. "I had a letter from one of the coaches the other day which painted a very dismal picture. So I guess Duke is going to do all right."

Coach Alex pointed out Tech's material would be somewhat green. "I'll throw that Bartlett in there and he'll probably throw away a few games. But he has to learn, doesn't he?"

A FINE DIRECTORATE.

A forward step in Southern sports circles was the formation of the Southern Association of Baseball Writers, and the delegates displayed fine judgment in their selection of officers.

Fred Russell, sports editor of The Nashville Banner, was elected president. Zipp Newman, sports editor of The Birmingham News, received the second highest number of votes, and, establishing a precedent, the delegates named him vice president. Bob Phillips, sports editor of The Birmingham Age-Herald, was voted secretary and treasurer.

The writers will promote "the square deal" in baseball and seek uniform scoring rules, among other things.

ACCOLADE WINS.

Donald Christmas' Accolade, a New England favorite, reeled off six furlongs in 1:11 1-5 yesterday to win the American Legion Day purse at Suffolk Downs.

Albany Plans to Honor Bob Rice, Ex-Manager

ALBANY, Ga., July 7.—(AP)—It will be Bob Rice day in the Albany stadium one week from today, marking the return of the former Travelers pilot for a brief visit.

Sam Brown Lippitt, president of the Kiwanis Club, sponsoring organization, will present the popular skipper of 1935-37 with a gift on behalf of Albany fans.

Americus club officials have given their consent for Rice, now business manager of the Asheville (N. C.) Tourists, to appear in the Albany lineup, probably at third base, the slot occupied by the ex-playing manager before he hung up his glove in favor of a front office post.

JAMES A. WINS. R. L. Hanna's James A. came through with a surprise victory in the $2,000 six-furlong feature at Delaware Park yesterday. Under Hilton Dabson's guidance, the five-year-old gelding took an early lead, gave way to Donald Ross' Bull Whip at the half-way mark and then came on again to finish three-quarters of a length in front of A. C. Compton's Sun Egret and pay $13.90 for $2.

CATCHES FOX. VALDOSTA, Ga., July 7.—Charlie Kelley, eight years of age, of Lowndes county, has the record for summer fox hunting—although it was altogether unintentional.

Dodd left early yesterday afternoon to golf and swim at Sea Island during the week end, while Ridley, using two iron clubs, will play Dodd, using only a No. 3 wood, on the Capital City course. Dodd reiterated before leaving that he is not trying to squirrel out of the match.

Crackers Triumph Over All-Star Team

of the league put together, won their most brilliant victory of the season.

So they must deserve to be on top. Larry Miller started for the Crackers and pitched three innings. He gave up four hits and only one run. He was the winning pitcher.

Leo Moon, the old man of the mountain, portended the All-Stars into virtual submission for the next five innings. He allowed five hits, but the three runs were more a result of a bad support in one inning than anything else.

YIELDS ONE HIT. Ted Petrosky, the former Georgetown collegian, finished the game. He gave up only one hit and no runs.

After Crouch retired, Woody Rich, one of Little Rock's aces, essayed to carry on. The Crackers belted him out in two-thirds of an inning. Garland Braxton, Little Rock left-hander, relieved and the Crackers ended the third inning with seven runs across. Rich was the losing pitcher.

Braxton pitched three innings and gave up three hits and three runs. Red Evans, pride of New Orleans, was the last pitcher. The Crackers got to him for four runs and four hits in the eighth.

There was no way to stop the Crackers once they started. They shelled what is regarded as the best pitching in the league and made a complete rout of the All-Star aggregation.

The Crackers put on a great hitting and fielding show, with the exception of their one bad inning afield, and gave the season's largest crowd a great night.

Lipscomb was the big hitting star of the Cracker side. He got three hits and drove in three runs. Mauldin and Chatham each got two hits. Doc Prothro sold Lipscomb.

But Cracker pitching was the thing. Miller and Moon, especially Moon, and Petrosky put the other four league mound stars in the shade.

The Crackers made the most of their 15 hits. The All-Stars did well to score four runs with their help. Errors and spotty fielding helped them out.

Goodness knows, they needed some help, however. The Crackers got them down and wouldn't let them up. It was murder on the diamond. The All-Stars scored first, but never were in the game after the third.

PLAYERS INTRODUCED. Before the game President Trammell Scott introduced players of both teams and presented them their checks for the game. Fred Russell, new president of the Southern Association of Baseball Writers, introduced the colorful array of visiting scribes to the crowd.

It was a brilliant occasion. And a perfect game from the crowd standpoint. Never before this season have they seen the pace-setting Crackers cut loose in such a manner.

And they did it, as said, against the rest of the league put together. They can't even gang up on the Cracker All-Stars and beat them. The fans are entitled to all credit for their support. It's the greatest baseball town anywhere. No other Southern league town would have turned out as did Atlanta.

The All-Stars put two runners, Rodda and Walker, on the bases in the first inning with one away but Grace hit into a fast double play.

Chatham bounced a single over Crouch's head in the Crackers' half and advanced to third on infield out. He was left stranded as Crouch fanned Rose.

The All-Stars scored in the second. After George grounded out, Campbell singled over Chatham's head. He advanced to second on a wild pitch. Honeycutt's single through short scored Campbell.

Snyder hit into a double play. Hill led off the Crackers' half with a walk and died on first when Lipscomb fouled out to George and Bolling and Williams flied out.

The All-Stars went out in order in the third.

SEVEN RUNS. Then in the Crackers' half, Sunkel, batting for Miller, singled to right off Rich, who had just gone in to pitch. Chatham popped up. Mailho doubled down the right-field line and Pritchett, running for Sunkel, stopped at third.

Directors Authorize Scott To Put 'Teeth' Into Stalling Rules

FINES, PENALTIES MAY BE METHOD TO SPEED GAMES

Intermission Between Night Double-Headers Reduced 10 Minutes.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Directors of the Southern association in session here yesterday gave President Trammell Scott a strong weapon in his campaign to speed up games by authorizing him to "put teeth into the stalling rules."

Scott said that while present association rules cover stalling they do not set up a proper system of penalties and said he would announce in the near future new regulations to eliminate slow-motion tactics in the interest of the fans.

The directors also eliminated from the rules on night games the section preventing the starting of the second game of any night double-header after 11 p. m. As amended, the rule now reads that no inning of any night game may start after 12:01 a. m. on the day following the night in which the game is started.

10 MINUTES BETWEEN. Also in the interest of speeding up play the intermission between the games of night double-headers was reduced from 20 minutes to 10 minutes.

President Scott, Larry Gilbert, of New Orleans, and Earl Mann, of Atlanta, were named as a committee to co-operate with the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in making arrangements for the association's annual meeting, to be held this year in New Orleans.

Scott was named as a committee of one to work with the newly created Southern Association of Baseball Writers in working out problems of common interest, including uniformity in scoring interpretations.

SEEK FREE AGENTS.

It also was decided to seek permission for Southern association clubs to pay bonuses to obtain the services of free agents. At present this privilege is limited to major and AA clubs.

In addition to Scott, those at the meeting were Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta club; Billy West and Ed Norton, representing Birmingham; Bob Allen, of Little Rock, representing Little Rock and Knoxville; Jimmy Hamilton, acting for Fay Murray, owner of the Nashville club; Tom Watkins, of Memphis; Larry Gilbert, New Orleans' player-manager-director; Owner Joe Engel, of Chattanooga; Ed Hargraves, of Chattanooga, acting as secretary in place of J. G. Sanders, of Memphis, who could not attend.

WATTS GUNN DRIVES ONE "AT HOME" AGAIN

Watts Gunn, former Georgia, Southern and National Intercollegiate golf champion, celebrated his return "home" yesterday with a perfect drive off No. 3 tee on the No. 1 East Lake course. Others in the foursome, left to right, are Jack Rutland, Scott Hudson Jr., a former Atlanta amateur champion, and Herb Bonner, one of the greatest ends ever to play on Auburn's teams. Gunn is visiting friends here, en route to Florida.

BUFORD SWAMPS DUNDEE, 20 TO 7

BUFORD, Ga., July 7.—Buford's high-flying Shoemakers pounded out 20 hits here tonight and swamped Dundee Towels, of Griffin, 20 to 7.

Lefty Nixon, hurling for the Shoemakers, coasted to victory after his mates had given him such a huge margin.

Andy Johnson, Red McSwain and Henry Wagon collected three hits each for the winners, while Stewart contributed an equal number to the losing cause.

By Innings:
Dundee 210 000 031—7 13 7
Buford 230 325 122—20 20 4
Denton, Hooks and Ratliff, Jenkins, Nixon and Wagon.

ing managers and writers, Joe Engel issued a hot tip.

"Here's a hot one in the Southern league derby," Engel declared. "Chattanooga first, Knoxville second . . . all trains going east."

A special crying cage was arranged by the writers for Engel. He promptly issued a general duty to the entire league.

The meeting also brought out the rivalry between Nashville and Little Rock. They're looking for fireworks when the Vols move into the Pebs' home park on the next trip.

Former Champ Plays With East Lake Friends

Pairs With Scott Hudson Jr. Against Herb Bonner and Jack Rutland.

By ROY WHITE.

Watts Gunn came "home" yesterday. Georgia's former state, southern and national intercollegiate golf champion shot par golf on the No. 1 East Lake course, where in years gone by Watts learned the game in which he later became of national importance.

Gunn played in a foursome with Scott Hudson Jr., a former Atlanta amateur champion; Herb Bonner, one of the greatest ends ever to play for Auburn, and Jack Rutland, a close friend.

It was home, sweet home for Watts as he clicked off pars in rapid succession on the familiar old course. "Many changes have made it tougher and the old course isn't what it used to be. But just the same it's home for me," he said.

EN ROUTE TO FLORIDA. Watts is on a visit with friends here en route to Florida.

"I hope to be here long enough to play a round with your new British Amateur champion, Charlie Yates, and also a round with Bobby Jones," Gunn added as he battled par under a broiling hot sun.

Gunn and Jones in 1925 gave Atlanta and the Athletic Club one of the most unusual records in all golf history. A record which still stands unchallenged today.

A RECORD. Jones beat Gunn, 8-7, on the Oakmont Country Club for the National Amateur championship. Two players from the same club in the finals of the National Amateur. And it was quite a coincidence that Gunn, a few years later, was made a member of the Oakmont Club, after being transferred to Pittsburgh.

Gunn won the National Intercollegiate championship for Tech in 1927 and in 1928 he won the Southern Amateur at Dallas, Texas, and incidentally is the last Atlanta to win the crown. He was twice Georgia's amateur champion in 1923 and again in 1927.

That memorable 1925 match for the National Amateur at Oakmont still stands out as a monument in the history of Atlanta golfers. Jones persuaded Watts' father to let Watts play in the National Amateur. And Jones almost regretted the incident. At one time in the match Bobby was trailing his fellow Atlantan. In a sand trap he remarked that if he didn't blast out close to the pin, it was just too bad, but fortunately Jones blasted out close to the pin and went on to win the match. "I'll never seek another companion in a golf tourney," Bobby remarked after the match.

BONNER RECALLED. Herb Bonner is another famous athlete well remembered by Atlantans and more particularly Tech football players. He was one of Auburn's greatest ends and played on the 1915, 1916 and 1919 teams. The Bonner family was represented on the Auburn football team for 17 straight years and all Auburn's opposition was glad when the brothers and cousins "ran out."

Bonner and Rutland have not won the golf prominence of Gunn and Hudson, but they were paired so that it was a tough, close match all the way.

It was par golf for Hudson and Gunn.

Eight Divide Prize In East Lake Bogey

Eight golfers carded 75's to share the lead in the blind bogey tournament yesterday at East Lake. Sixty golfers entered the meet.

J. C. Thomson, Alan Yates, E. R. Foss, E. A. Thornwell, W. R. Bentley, Dr. L. H. Kelley, P. G. Lombard and A. J. Vance were first-prize winners.

At 74 were W. F. Hammond, P. D. McCarty, Gene Brooks, E. L. Wight, Claude Gizzard, C. G. De Normandie. Those carding 76's were Hugh Burgess, J. H. Irwin, Travis Johnson, J. J. McConneghey, J. B. Stuart, Dr. C. L. Douglas, C. Y. Smith, T. A. Martin and A. C. Spinks.

TRIO CARDS 140 TO SHARE LEAD IN BRITISH OPEN

Cox, Bussan and Burton Top Field; Cotton Has 147.

SANDWICH, England, July 7.—(AP)—Three British Ryder Cup players, Bill Cox, Jack Bussan and Dick Burton, tied for the lead in the British open golf championship today with 36-hole totals of 140.

Henry Cotton, defending champion, was seven strokes behind the leaders in 25th place after adding a 73 to his 74 of yesterday for a two-round total of 147.

Thirty-seven players, who scored 148 or better, qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

The biggest surprise of the day was the collapse of 18-year-old Jimmy Bruen, Irish Walker Cup player, who followed a first-round 70 with an 80 and was eliminated.

Bussan and Burton both fired one-under-par 69's today while Cox was the acme of steadiness with a pair of 70's for his 36-hole total.

A stroke away at 141 were Bert Gadd and Jim Adams. Gadd posted a 70 and Adams a 71 in the second round. Reginald Whitcombe, adding another 71, held sixth place at 142 followed by R. G. French with 143 and Marcel Dallemagne, of France, and J. L. Black, each with 144. French posted a 71 today and Black a 72 but Dallemagne fell off to 74.

Of recent former winners, neither Alf Perry nor Alf Padgham was much better off than Cotton. Perry was five strokes away at 154 with Padgham another stroke back.

Cyril Tolley, the long-hitting amateur, produced the best round of the day, a 68, that equalled the amateur course record, and easily qualified with 145.

RAILMEN ENTER SEMI-PRO MEET

ROME, Ga., June 7.—Southern Railway, of Atlanta; Pepperells, of Lindale; Crown Cotton Mills, of Dalton; and Anchor Duck, of Rome, were the new entries added to the second annual Georgia State Semi-Pro Baseball Tournament which starts here Saturday.

Gulf Oil, of Atlanta, and Dixie Mills, of LaGrange, will play the opening game Saturday. The Sunday schedule will feature Tubize Mills, of Rome, and Anchor Duck in a league game to be followed by a tournament contest.

The Rome Chamber of Commerce has worked far into the night to make the tournament a great success. Teams from all sections of the state will gather here for the battle for the beautiful Bonus Wagner trophy.

Efforts are under way to have Luke Appling, injured White Sox shortstop, on hand to take part in the opening-day program Saturday.

Three Bouts Set On Hemphill Card

Promoter Jason Thompson, who opened Atlanta's new wrestling arena, the Hemphill Arena, with three matches last week comes back with three more tonight. In the main event Cowboy Billy McEwen, the Texas terror, clashes with Nick Elitch, the Tampa, Fla., heavyweight. Charlie Keene, former Red Shadow and winner of over 300 consecutive matches, meets Charlie Layden, of Kansas City, in the semi-final, and Jack Kogut, the Canadian champ, meets Bob Corby, of St. Louis, in the opener.

The arena is located at Hemphill avenue and 14th street, N. W.

Key Golfers Meet In Medal Tourney

Ten days will be allowed for the 36 holes, with July 17 set for the deadline.

A BIG LAUGH FROM TONY

What Tony Galento, ranked as No. 1 challenger, thinks of the current heavyweight champion of the world, is very apparent from this picture, made in Tony's bar at Orange, N. J. Tony's next opponent is to be John Henry Lewis, colored light-heavyweight.

LONDOS, HACKNEY BATTLE TONIGHT

Young Londos, popular Atlanta grappler, will be honored at a home-coming celebration tonight at the Avondale arena, where he tackles Honey Boy Hackney in the main event.

Londos recently returned from California, where he wrestled Roy McGuirk, light-heavy champ, to a draw, and won 50 out of 54 bouts.

This will be the toughest opposition Londos has been assigned in his home town, for Hackney is rated one of the cleverest of mat performers. Until Londos' stock went up so high as a result of his recent trip, the Atlantan was not considered a worthy opponent for Hackney. All that has changed now, and fans are assured a lively bout will take place.

Nick Burns will battle Jack McAdams in the one-hour semi-final match, and Sergeant Joe Wood, United States army, battles Lou Rainey, of Galveston, in the opening bout. The program will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

Druid Hills To Stage Ladies' Day Tourney

Prizes for low gross, low net, and the least number of putts will be given today in the regular weekly one-day tournament sponsored by the Druid Hills Women's Golf Association.

Mrs. Ben Barrow, chairman of the Druid Hills tournament committee, and Harry Stephens, the club professional, will be in charge of the tournament.

Brown's Chin In Danger On 18th

Babe Risko (Harry Pytkowsky to his mother) will show Atlantan one of the hardest right hands in boxing the night of July 18, when the former middleweight champion of the world comes here to meet Atlanta's Ben Brown in a 10-round battle at Warren arena.

Risko (Polish-American descent) has knocked out scores of leading fighters and a glance at his record indicates that Ben Brown's bobbing chin will be in grave danger the night of the 18th. Perhaps Risko's most notable kayo win was over Teddy Yarosz, himself a former champion and one of the leading contenders today, but the Babe has put away a number of other stars, including Joe Lynch, Pete Suskey and Bucky Lawless.

Risko, born in 1911, should be at his peak today. He lost his title to Freddie Steel in 1936 after a hard 15-round battle. He came back to beat such standout ringmen as Harry Balsamo and Tony Tozzo.

Jones, Yates Help Open Canton Club

Charlie Yates, Bob Jones, Charlie Black Jr. and Bud Bicknell will play an exhibition next Wednesday on the Canton course in the feature of the opening of the Canton clubhouse.

Tyre Jones, of Canton, and Tom Arnold are in charge of arrangements for the opening.

JOE HUNT UPSET IN COLLEGE PLAY BY BOB HARMON

Frank Guernsey Advances; Murphy Twins Are Beaten.

HAVERFORD, Pa., July 7.—(AP) Top-seeded Joseph Hunt, of Southern California, was knocked out of the national intercollegiate tennis singles championship today at the Merion Cricket Club.

Hunt, ranked fifth nationally, bowed to Robert Harman, of the University of California, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2, in the second surprise of the tournament. Monday second-seeded Don O'Neill, of Kenyon College, was beaten.

Accompanying Harman into the round of four were Frank Guernsey Jr., of Rice Institute, Texas, who defeated his neighbor, Robert Kamrath, University of Texas, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1; Lewis Wetherell, of South California, and Morey Lewis, of Kenyon College.

Wetherell staggered through three sets to conquer Chester Murphy, one of the University of Chicago twins, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4, and Lewis scored his second upset in two days by beating William Murphy, the other Chicago twin, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. Yesterday Lewis defeated fourth-seeded Julius Heldman, of Southern California.

Tomorrow Wetherell encounters Lewis, while Harman meets Guernsey.

Championship shots and man-nerisms stuck out all over Hunt against the laboring Harman, but for every brilliant shot Hunt put over, he followed with three or four poor ones. Harman scored point after point with a blistering forehand drive that forced Hunt off the court to return. Both players had plenty of depth, but in the long rallies Harman proved the steadier. In the second set Hunt began to show signs of exhaustion.

Humphries' Hurling Earns Salary Raise

CLEVELAND, July 7.—(AP)—The Cleveland baseball club disclosed today it had torn up the 1938 contract of Johnny Humphries, outstanding rookie pitcher, and replaced it with a new one good for the remainder of this season and all of 1939.

The club said it had given Humphries an advance in salary because of his effective relief pitching. The Clifton Forge, Va., right-hander has participated in 14 games this year, mostly in a relief role. Of the six games in which he has figured for the averages, he has won four and lost two.

The Indians' management was silent on terms of the new contract, but sports writers speculated it probably raised his salary from about $4,000 to perhaps $6,000 a year. Humphries, 23, won 20 and lost 7 games with New Orleans last year.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—Henry Ford faced the choice tonight of bargaining collectively with a CIO union at St. Louis or fighting the recommendation of a Labor Board trial examiner that he do so.

T. E. At police headquarters she was listed as Bertha Dozier, 19, of 498 Hunter street. A charge of suspicion of larceny was docketed against her.

Officers reported she had made a complete confession covering about 25 thefts. A quantity of dresses and pocketbooks was found in her home. A check of pawnshops will be started this morning and the loot returned as soon as it can be identified.

CORRUPT PRACTICE CHARGED TO RADIO

CBS and NBC Assailed by Representative in Congressional Record.

$60,000,000 when the Securities and Exchange Commission showed the total cash investment of those who originally held these securities was less than $1,600,000.

Demanding an investigation of what he termed the "radio monopoly," Connery accused unnamed members of the Federal Communications Commission of fostering monopoly. He also said:

"An investigation of the radio monopoly will show wherein two of the commissioners, who, by their official acts made the present monopoly possible, on leaving the commission were presented with a vice presidency of the Columbia Broadcasting Company; that a present high executive of one of the radio chains secured his position and draws a princely salary each year because of his ability to influence a Washington banker to advance several thousands of dollars to an official of a governmental agency, in charge of regulating radio, to equip radio stations, which he held with others, contrary to law."

Connery did not name the officials. He said conditions in the Communications Commission were "deplorable" and that "the influence of the radio monopoly will plague congress until a real congressional investigation is made and proper remedial legislation enacted."

Connery praised George Henry Payne, who is a minority member of the Communications Commission, and who has deplored what he called "abuses" in the radio field.

MONOPOLY PROBES OUTLINE COURSE

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—The "temporary national economic committee" took the first step today in a broad investigation of monopolistic practices in business, appointing a subcommittee empowered to subpoena records of business firms.

The committee outlined a general course which Chairman O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, said pointed definitely toward an "objective, not a punitive, study of monopoly."

O'Mahoney said it was safe to assume that when the committee completed its work it would recommend to congress a general policy to be adopted by the government toward business.

When O'Mahoney is absent from the city, Representative Sumners, Democrat, Texas, will head the subcommittee. Other members are Representative Eicher, Democrat, Iowa, and Chairman W. O. Douglas, of the Securities Commission.

Here's How Old Style Fried Chicken Should Be Eaten

Mrs. Frank Innan Jr., of 69 Maddox drive, a recent bride, demonstrates how easy it is to eat chicken when it is cut into pieces small enough to pick up in your fingers. Nevertheless she believes they would welcome a reform movement.

SLAIN GIRL'S BODY IS FOUND IN HOME

Note Tells of Lost Love; Man Admits Having Lived With Woman.

CENTRALIA, Ill., July 7.—(AP)—The body of a slain attractive Mary Britton, a bullet wound in the heart, was found half-clad on the bedroom floor of a fashionable home here late today.

Chief of Police Kaelin said the body was discovered by Elvin Satterlee, an automobile dealer, and added that Satterlee had rented the house "several months ago."

Dr. E. N. Neber asserted the girl had been dead for "from one to three hours" and apparently had died instantly.

Kaelin quoted Satterlee as saying he and a friend, Arthur Donie, had gone to St. Louis about 1 o'clock, and had found the body when they returned at 6 p. m. Donie verified this.

Kaelin asserted a revolver lay on a blood-soaked bed in the same room. A bullet was found in a pillow.

Underneath the body, Kaelin declared, was a lengthy note which said in part, "I love you and you have fell in love with someone else," and was signed, "Love, Mary."

"Indications point to suicide, but there's something peculiar," Chief Kaelin declared after his investigation.

The "peculiar" things included, he said, a battered and blood-stained coffee pot in a downstairs room, a broken lamp, broken china, closet and other disorder downstairs.

The officer asserted Satterlee had admitted another section of the note, which he quoted as saying, "I have lived with you as man and wife for three years."

Dowagers, Debutantes, Newlyweds Like Their Chicken Fried in Pieces

Atlanta Women Fall in Line Behind Mayor Hartfield for Battle Against 'Hunk of Fowl' as Now Served in South.

Dowagers, debutantes, newlyweds, matrons and schoolgirls fell in line behind Mayor Hartfield last night as he marched bravely forward carrying the high banner of "We Want Fried Chicken in Sensible Sizes."

From West Pace's Ferry road to the Biltmore hotel, inclusive, rose an army in favor of southern fried chicken in "finger eating pieces," with a few good words for the so-called served half a chicken.

Here are a few opinions: Tommye Quinn, 71 Montgomery Ferry Drive: "Sure, I like chicken in pieces, because I like to pick it up. The half-fried is entirely too hard to eat to enjoy. Besides, I don't like to eat anything I have to be so formal about. The only trouble about fried chicken any style is that not enough hostesses serve it. I only remember it at two parties last year."

Marianna Adair, 12 28th street: "I like my fried chicken in pieces and plenty of it. Somehow you seem to get more that way."

Isabel Boykin, 909 Myrtle street: "Who ever heard of eating fried chicken with a knife and fork and really enjoying it? I'll take mine in pieces every time."

Frances Young, 866 Oakdale road: "My favorite piece is the gizzard. You can't ever have the gizzard if you have half a fried chicken. I'll take mine in pieces for that reason—because I can get more."

Mary Eakin, 887 Myrtle street, a newcomer among debutante ranks from Little Rock: "I always had chicken in pieces at home, and Atlanta won't change me. Besides that, it's better all hot and fried piece by piece."

Atlanta matrons who not only enjoy fried chicken but also are called upon to give instructions to their servants for preparing the famous southern dish, were almost 100 per cent in their opinion of the half and piece of chicken.

Mrs. John M. Slaton, 2962 Peachtree road, former first lady of the state: "I was brought up on fried chicken, but we always had it cooked in pieces. It's much better that way, because if one really likes fried food the flavor is retained more in the individual cooking. And then it goes further, too."

Mrs. Charles J. Haden, 1521 Peachtree street: "I like chicken and I like it fried, but not in batter. Rolled in flour is best and it's easier to eat in pieces."

Mrs. Asa G. Candler Jr., Briarcliff road: "Half or in pieces, to have a good chicken is the most important thing to consider. It's more like fried chicken when it's served in pieces."

Mrs. Moreland Speer, 216 Twelfth street: "Chicken tastes good any way, but the old-fashioned way is the best and that's when it is fried in pieces. The thigh and drumsticks should be fried together, but the whole half is too hard to eat and it's not as good, anyway."

Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, Biltmore Apartments: "Fried chicken is fit for the gods in any form, but I prefer it in halves because it retains its juices and flavor. The preparation and serving, however, is left to the individual tastes."

The sub-debts have their ideas, too, and when it comes to chicken—salad, a la king or fried—they are right there with their plates ready. Here is what a few of them say:

MAYOR DEMANDS CUT-UP CHICKEN

There Ought To Be a Law— Councilmen Join in Fight.

ters of delicious, brown-fried chicken all cut up and ready to be eaten, other members of council joined the fight.

"I'll back the mayor 100 per cent," said Councilman Howard Haire, his mouth watering. "When food is being considered I'm always ready to talk turkey—I mean chicken."

The mayor's sudden tirade came as the aftermath of a round of banquets. Week after week he has been confronted with big hunks of chicken that could be consumed only after a laborious breaking-down process that sometimes had tragic endings.

"With your elbows glued to your sides you hardly know how to dig into one of those half-frys," he declared. "If you really go to work in earnest, the first thing you know your chicken has flopped over into somebody else's lap, and if you're timid about the whole thing you don't stand much chance of getting any chicken."

"Why it would take a dissecting artist and an anatomical expert to cut up some of the hunks I've tried to battle with in my time," he continued.

"I've seen ladies in evening dress who appeared to be just as distressed as I. I've seen them stare at the big pieces for a while until they mustered enough courage to tackle it. Then after a battle that brought perspiration to their foreheads, they'd shift and start from another angle, until finally they would give up in disgust."

Since the south is famous for its southern fried chicken, the mayor thinks the old southern style should prevail to maintain her reputation, if for no other reason. He is of the opinion hotels and convention directors would make a hit by sticking to the old style.

His Honor is also concerned about another phase of the dish. The chicken is usually served on toast. But the toast is rarely eaten, and it performs no real service in keeping the chicken from sliding into another's lap. It's compulsory that a knife be used, why not use a rubber mat that has some kind of suction apparatus to hold the chicken on the plate?

As for the mayor, he prefers to pick up his drumsticks and eat it the easy way. But then there are some who think they must follow the dictates of Emily Post, and since there are that kind of people they ought to be aided in some way, he reasons.

But the mayor is concerned principally with the back-to-southern-style movement. He's a southern gentleman, suh, and he likes his chicken the same way.

Many other Atlantans agree with the mayor. Maybe the next move will be the organization of "Dissect-That-Chicken Clubs."

Former Atlantan's Stay in Korea Marked by Varied Experiences

By Sally Forth.

A MOST interesting former Atlantan who is receiving a cordial welcome here following a three-year stay in Seoul, Korea, is Miss Corinne Gerding, who arrived this week to visit her sister, Mrs. Harvie Jordan. Miss Gerding, who made the trip on a Japanese boat, landed in San Francisco and hurried to Atlanta as fast as train could bring her.

Though her life in the Far East has been most fascinating, she is enthusiastic over being home again. The war clouds that have engulfed the Orient during the past year have kept life from being as carefree and happy as it was during her first two years in the Korean capital.

Miss Gerding, who is a native of Athens and a representative of a pioneer Georgia family, went to Seoul three years ago to join her brother, Joseph L. Gerding, who for 30 years was a missionary in the Far East. He returned to the States last year, and is at Lake Junaluska, N. C., at present, but Miss Gerding had signed a three-year contract to teach in Seoul and was unable to leave until the expiration of that contract at the close of the past school year.

Her work was most interesting, as she taught children of all nationalities, all of whom spoke English, in an age range from 7 to 12 years. Her pupils were children of the missionaries, consuls and families whose business interests kept them in the east.

Miss Gerding talks most entertainingly of the city that was her home for three years, except for summer vacations when she traveled throughout the Orient. Korea is a dependency of Japan and the governor general and all officials are Japanese. They have tried to make Korea a Japanese country, but the natives have refused to adopt the costumes and manners of the other country and still try to be independent. Though the country and its people are, as a rule, poor, some of the native Koreans are persons of wealth, and Miss Gerding tells interesting tales of being entertained at tea in some of the homes of the wealthy in the city.

Following a few days here, Miss Gerding will go to Athens for a visit with relatives, later returning to this city for an extended stay.

ATLANTA radio fans who were listening in Wednesday evening to Kay Kyser and his "Musical Kollege" broadcast, experienced a thrill and a pleasurable surprise when they heard the name of Mrs. Robert Hare III called.

Mrs. Hare, you know, is the former Helen Candier and talent as an entertainer is well known, for everyone remembers her performance in the last Junior League Follies. Helen took part on the program along with several others selected at random from the audience by Kyser, as his program went on the air from one of the special theaters in Radio City.

If you are familiar with the "Musical Kollege" skit, you know that each week Kay himself asks those on the program a variety of questions on many subjects, with radio having a slight lead.

Helen carried the colors of Atlanta high in the air, as it were, by winning second place, plus the prize of $20. Sally hears that her failure to name the author of "My Old Kentucky Home" caused her to miss first prize.

Mrs. Franke is now the guest of Mrs. Schillinger at her home on Peachtree road, having been in the city for the past week attending the convention of the Woman's Overseas League, of which she is vice president of the Third Corps. She will return to the national capital on Friday.

Ben Hill Club

The Ben Hill Garden Club met at the clubhouse recently, with Mrs. Roy Baker and Mrs. J. M. Wallace as hostesses.

An interesting program was enjoyed. Mrs. E. A. Van Norden read a poem and Mrs. Marcus Cash spoke on gladiolus. Mrs. C. P. Suber spoke on lilies and Mrs. L. G. Fulton spoke on table arrangements.

A picnic was planned for August at Adams Park. An ice cream supper was planned for July 30 to raise funds for the civic project.

Lexington Ave. Club

The Lexington Avenue Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. L. B. Hilderbrand recently. The president, Mrs. W. B. Beckham, presided. In the games the prizes went to Mrs. J. R. Hanie and Mrs. W. F. Beck.

R. L. Leach, 648 Lexington avenue, on July 27 at 3 o'clock. The club's annual picnic will be discussed.

Present were Mesdames W. H. Alford, W. F. Beck, M. B. Beckham, Claude J. Conley, H. D. Hancock, J. R. Hanie, W. C. McGhee and L. B. Hilderbrand.

"Sweet Revenge Never Pays Sufficiently", Says Caroline Chatfield

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD
Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondents invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield in care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: After thirty years of happy married life I discovered that my husband was interested in a young girl a third his age. Both he and she promised me they would call a halt but three years later my husband confessed that he had lied to me. The girl turned him down for one her own age and now he hates her and wonders that he could have been so cruel and cowardly. He is penitent, sad and anxious to make amends, which he can never do.

Had it not been for my adorable children and my religion I would have lost my mind, and sometimes yet I doubt my sanity; for although I no longer care for my husband he is an obsession with me. The children urge me to divorce him. Shall I listen to them? Is revenge ever sweet enough to pay for taking it? Can I ever again love and respect a husband who has belonged to another?

BROKEN-HEARTED WIFE.

Answer: No, my dear woman, you shouldn't divorce your husband on your children's say-so. Revenge is never sweet enough to pay a wife for wrecking it on her husband, the father of her children. Humiliated, anguished at the moment you don't realize it but you still love your husband and no doubt he will be able to rebuild your respect for him—in a measure, at least.

You know the argument which every woman can repeat by rote yet never grasp with mind or heart: that a man who loves his wife sometimes steps out for a short walk, trips, falls and can't get up immediately. When he does get up he expects to go back to his wife, have her kiss his bruises, tell him that she understands, forgives, forgets, and loves him; all of which she has to do if she wishes to keep him.

Maybe life can never be quite the same for the woman who has had this supreme humiliation either living with her husband or separated from him. However, ties of 30 years are not easily broken and when she adds to her anguish the sharp pain of parting

From him, she's made matters worse.

There is such a thin line between love and hate that when a dear one wounds us on the quick and we are flopping about like a chicken with its neck wrung, we frequently flop over this thin line; but we flop back before we have finished. Now, my dear woman, heed your religion's dictate which says forgive. You'll never regret it.

Bridge Lite

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN
TWO-WAY FINESSES.

Where is the bridge player, from Myrtle Beach to the Atlantic to Waikiki in the Pacific, who has not been target for the post-mortem shot by some long-necked kibitzer: "Game was there... ice cold! You took your finesse the wrong way!"

And the usual reply, in tones ranging all the way from a whisper to a shriek:

"Yes, but how was I to know?" Quite frequently, the fact of the matter is, declarer should or could have known.

While the attempt to "count" opponents' hands should be made on every deal... if for no more reason than to acquire the habit of counting... there is no better time to actually demonstrate the advantages to be gained by counting than when declarer discovers a two-way finesse spread between his two hands.

North and South arrive at a five-club contract, holding:

NORTH
S-A 9 3
H-8 4 2
D-K 10 7
C-Q 5 4

WEST
S-K 6
H-6 3
D-A 3
C-K J 9 3 2

SOUTH

FIRST COUNT OBTAINED.

The success of the contract depends on a diamond finesse. As West wins two heart tricks, East discards a small diamond on the second lead. West, therefore, must have held six hearts originally. Declarer trumps West's third lead of hearts and leads two rounds of clubs. East shows out on the second trump lead. Declarer now knows West held three clubs originally and that West's remaining four cards are distributed between spades and diamonds.

COUNT COMPLETED.

Declarer is interested in West's diamond holding so he leads spades twice and trumps the third spade led from dummy. West follows suit to the three spade leads. Therefore, West cannot have more than one diamond. Declarer can now lead a low diamond through West up to dummy's king-ten.

COUNT TRUMP FIRST.

If West holds the queen singleton it is lost. If East has the queen, a return up to declarer's ace-jack will capture it. At suit contracts obtain a count of opponent's trumps as early as possible. Then to obtain a complete count of a second suit be on the lookout for opponent's first failure to follow suit. Keep trying on every deal you play.

Till tomorrow... for The Constitution

Before you despair of getting down to normal weight, be sure that it is your normal weight. You can't just go by your height in estimating the weight best for you. With extremely thick bones your normal weight may be as much as 28 pounds heavier than another person of the same height with thin bones.

Such a wide variation in normal weight for persons of the same height was found to exist recently in experiments conducted recently by Dr. C. H. McCloy, and reported by Miss Eleanor Metheny of the physical education division, at the State University of Iowa.

By accurately measuring the circumference of the chest and the width of hips and knees it was possible to take structure as well as height into account in these experiments. As a result, it was discovered that one girl of five feet six inches was normal weight at 117 pounds, another at 145 pounds—a difference of 28 pounds! A third girl with medium build was normal weight at 130 pounds.

In explaining the experiments, Miss Metheny refers to the slightly built girl as Mary, the medium size girl as Jane, and the girl with the large frame as Anne. And to quote her: "It is only reasonable to assume with their varying dimensions that Jane should normally weigh more than Mary, and Anne more than either. . . . In observing these girls it was plainly seen that had Mary ever reached 130 pounds she would have been as well upholstered as a day-enport and that had Anne lost 25 pounds she would have been mere skin and bones."

Normal weight depends upon bone structure.

As far as the average person is concerned there is—as admitted by Miss Metheny—a decided drawback to such an accurate computation of normal weight. Special instruments are required to make the measurements and the calculations must be made by a trained person. Just knowing of the wide variation in weight for height, however, may restrain you from setting your goal at a weight normal for some one with a much lighter structure than yours.

Since you are entitled to a protective layer of fat for warmth and reserve against illness as well as beauty, Miss Metheny gives a "rule of thumb" for measuring your subcutaneous fat. "It may be estimated by taking the thumb and forefinger and picking up a fold of skin above the hip. For men this fold should be approximately half an inch thick, and for women about three-fourths of an inch."

The "Mary" mentioned in the experiments was found to be underweight, and when her muscles were measured, it was discovered that she needed exercise to develop her musculature quite as much as a richer diet, the latter to provide the protective layer of fat. Whether or not your muscles are underdeveloped, it would be a mistake to go on a diet to gain without exercising. You want curves, not fat pads, and exercise is necessary for perfect distribution of weight.

An easy way to include structure in your estimation of normal weight is to allow 100, 105 or 110 pounds for the first five feet of height, depending on a slight, medium or wide frame. To this basic weight five and one-half pounds is added for each additional inch of height. If your frame is extremely small or large, allow further for a 10 per cent variation so that your normal weight will conform as closely as possible to your build.

Beauty According To You

(Posed by Lana Turner.)

This Facial Tonic Possesses the Magic

Of Invigorating Mist of England

By LILLIAN MAE.

Don't think for a moment because to live in a land of sunshine instead of fog and shadow, that you can't have the enviable translucent skin of a rose petal.

Every bit as beauty-making as raising your face in English mist, is a delightfully clear, dewy lotion that soothes parched skin, floats out dust and grime and leaves the face as glowing and lovely as a rose petal.

Cool and revivifying, it not only tones the skin, but helps to stimulate the oil glands to normal activity, replenishing the necessary moisture and giving to the skin the same heaven-sent freshness and radiance of April rains.

I'm not just telling you what I've heard or read about this tonic, but what I know from actual experience of using it a few weeks. It is non-drying and mildly astringent. Use it after cleansing your face with cream; use it to freshen your face during the day; try spraying it on for a quick pickup after a hard day's shopping or an afternoon outdoors. Your skin will respond like a thirsty flower in a spring rain.

During these days when the mercury is trying to go through the top of the thermometer you have no idea how refreshing can be a facial bath with this tonic. Just saturate a piece of cotton and pat gently but liberally over the face and neck. In no time at all your skin will feel refreshed and firm again, and you'll be ready for what the day may bring.

Phone me for the name of this invigorating lotion which comes in a smart, modernistic bottle, and is priced at only $1. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope for reply.

NERVOUS HABITS CAN BE CURED IF HIDDEN CAUSE IS FOUND

TRADE "NERVES" FOR COLORFUL CHARM.

People have no patience with Norma's nervous habits. "She could stop that cheek-punching if she wanted to," they say. "Why, she might be attractive, interesting, if she weren't so jittery."

But Norma can't stop her irritating habits by just TELLING herself to stop. She has to dig up the cause—and that cause, as is often the case with sensitive, high-strung neurotics, lies in a childhood experience.

Thoughtless elders used to compare Norma with a prettier cousin—giving her a sense of inferiority which is still with her.

When meeting people she's so bothered by what they might think, she fidgets unbearably. Before important occasions, Norma gets indigestion, lies awake for hours.

No wonder Norma's real self—colorful and imaginative—has no chance for expression. But once Norma gets a psychiatrist's view of her case—realizes she's paying

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK—I am afraid you are going to grow weary of the recital of an uneventful life, so I will encourage you by telling you that the days this summer will not be as entirely uneventful as they seem to be just now.

I wonder how many of my readers like to play with archery? I am perhaps the world's stupidest person at sports of all kinds, but this game fascinates me. If you obey the rules, you finally seem to get somewhere, for I actually ended this morning's game with all my arrows on the target. I stopped then and there, for I knew that wouldn't happen again in a long time and I wanted to spend a few hours with a contented feeling.

The Connecticut Nutmeg is growing in size and it also has more advertisements. They are not very much use to me and, on page seven, the list of events taking place in Connecticut is also somewhat local in character. But how I enjoyed Mr. Quentin Reynolds on fishing! I didn't know anyone felt as I did, that this was a "dull and silly" pastime. I gave it up long ago but I never dared say how I felt about it, for I always had to acknowledge that I never caught any fish and therefore the failure was on my part and not on the part of the sport. But, to have someone who caught fish still feel the same way, is a great consolation.

Of course, perhaps the most amusing thing about the paper is the fact that the headlines so rarely fit what is written beneath them. That is as it should be, for frequently we never read the stories, which men and women have labored over for hours, just because we think the heading tells all about it. In any case, I am spending too much time over this new reading material which comes to me weekly. Yet it certainly is fun and stimulating.

One luxury in being lazy is that I feel I have a right to read late at night if I want to. The only drawback to that proceeding is that, in spite of all the screens all around my porch, strange little insects do get in and they bite much harder than their size would indicate. Even that doesn't prevent my luxuriating in reading in bed and last night I finished a book called "Of Lena Geyer," by Marcia Davenport.

It was published in 1937, so I am rather behind the times. Many people reading it will find some of it anything but expressive of their highest ideals, but I closed the book with a feeling that I had met a big person. Not just a wonderful singer whose voice had thrilled the people of many countries, but a person with the courage to be herself, with complete devotion to her work when she recognized that it was paramount. The ordinary people of the world could not judge her by their ordinary standards. She was narrow perhaps in her interests and she had a limited circle of intimate friends, but she was great in her feeling, great in her devotion to art, and how I wish I might have known her!

The book is written with humor as well as with insight and tenderness. Marcia Davenport has given me some very interesting hours.

PLEASANT HOMES

The season for long, tall drinks and frosty glasses.

A ring around the moon may forecast bad weather. A ring on the mahogany top of the baby grand or that lovely drop-leaf table is sure to forecast at least a bad hour or so when milady's temper gets the upper hand. This being the season of long, tall, drinks and frosty glasses (that drip!) there does seem to be some point in regarding this problem of rings on furniture and deciding what can be done about it.

And Plenty of Them.

Of course, there are always coasters, and plenty of them set on any and every piece of furniture that might be marred is one way to save the surfaces. There are some new-fangled ones with rubber suction cups on their middles that hug the glass and won't allow a careless sipper to walk away and forget the coaster. These come in many colors and styles and are pretty sensible, especially if you have absent-minded friends or a teen daughter fond of entertaining. And then, of course, there are latex petti-skirts for all types of glasses. They're little sensible dresses for the bottom half of dripping glasses. They can be slipped on in the kitchen, when the drink is made, and they will hang on through any afternoon or evening party.

Quite Drastic.

One friend of ours has had plate glass cut to fit every inviting top of her living-room furniture, using the tops in summer for appearance of coolness and as a guarantee against rings. That does seem quite drastic (not to mention expensive), but of course sometimes a lady gets to the point where she will go to any length to preserve her fine furniture.

However, "the best laid plans" may fail, and you may find, to your dismay, that someone forgot to the telephone or so absorbed in conversation. Anyway, there's the ring and what can you do about it? One trick that usually works is to lay a piece of plain brown wrapping paper over the ring and apply a (moderately) hot iron to the paper. Presto! the ring should disappear.

Of course, if the ring is a very bad one and you prize the furniture highly, it is a good idea to call in a good cabinet maker to apply some of his particularly type of magic to the spot.

Ring-around-the-rosewood end table is no fun. Coasters are the answer—and the ever-watchful hostess, of course!

Mrs. Houghton, Federation Director, Speaks at Club Institute in Athens

ATHENS, Ga., July 7.—(P)—Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, of Red Oak, Iowa, director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, today said "90 per cent of all people are peace-loving, but the 10 per cent under dictatorial governments are putting peace-loving nations in the defensive."

She urged delegates to the 16th annual institute of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the University of Georgia to exert a world-wide influence for peace and co-operation. She said Americans must take the lead.

"The Federation of Women's Clubs has become a world-wide organization. The fate of America is tied up with that of other nations. We must cast our shadows internationally."

Mrs. Houghton advocated education for peace and democracy, strict observance of treaties, caution in armament programs, suspicion of propaganda, taking profit out of war.

One hundred and thirty-two representatives from 44 Georgia cities are attending the institute.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. Stephen Holland, brilliant young lawyer, and his wife, Cynthia, have been divorced without scandal. She has tried to hold him through his love for their little daughter, Ellen, but has failed because he is convinced she is so hard and dominating that their marriage is a failure. In Washington, he meets Maris Kent. They become engaged. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VII.

The chauffeur was taking the bags upstairs. Mrs. Holland asked Maris if she would like to go to her room; if so the maid would take her. Maris said she always felt slightly dingy after a long train ride and she would like to change her clothes. Stephen said he was not so fastidious—he wanted to telephone the office at once and then would talk with his mother until Maris joined them.

The carpet on the stairs was thick and neither Mrs. Holland nor Stephen were facing the hall, as Maris came down half an hour later. Perhaps they had raised their voices more than they knew. However that may be Maris could not help hearing what they were saying.

"Cynthia has been wonderful about all this," said Mrs. Holland. "What is there to be wonderful about?" asked Stephen rather sharply. "Our marriage was a failure. I have married again. I don't see how it affects her in the least."

"Steve, how can you say that? Many women would make things uncomfortable for everyone concerned. But not Cynthia. If you could have heard how beautifully she explained to Ellen about your marriage, you'd have been deeply touched."

It was then that she saw Maris coming into the room. She was smiling as she came toward them. "Have you spoken to Ellen yet, Steve?"

"No. I thought mother could bring her over here so you two could become acquainted."

"She and her mother are out of town for a few days," said Mrs. Holland. "What a pretty frock that is, Maris."

"I tell you something—it's the prettiest one I have," she said impulsively. "You see, Mrs. Holland, I do want so much for you to like me—everything about me."

"Why, of course I am going to like you, my dear. You are Steve's wife."

"But I want you to like me in spite of my being Steve's wife, not because of it. I know our marriage must have been a shock to you—but I think I'm really a nice girl and I do love Steve."

"But, of course, my dear. I don't question it. And now, Steve, why don't you show Maris the garden—it's really quite lovely now—while I make a few necessary telephone calls."

Mrs. Holland had planned to accompany Maris when she went to look for a house, but she had a slight cold, so Maris insisted she stay at home.

"I never shopped for a house before," she said laughingly, "but from what I have seen, Maplewood is full of ducky ones, so I ought to manage. I'm going to be very business-like—tell the agent what we want and then look at his wares."

"I wish I could go with you," said Steve, "but I've been away from the office so long—"

"What would you know about it, anyway?" asked Maris with feminine superiority. "I'll do the heavy work and then we'll make the final decision together."

That afternoon she went to Stephen's office for the first time. "Don't worry, dear," she said. "I'm not going to be the kind of wife who bounces into her husband's office all the time, but I just had to come to tell you about the house I have found. It doesn't seem possible that I should find one just right, but I have. It has everything, but everything we need and want, and it costs even less than we said we would spend. I was so crazy about it. I almost signed for it then and there, but of course I wouldn't until you had seen it. But I warn you—you'd better say yes. Even the address is charming—19 Cameron Drive."

"Oh," said Stephen in a flat tone. "What's the gloom suddenly?" she asked gaily. "Is it haunted—or something?"

"The agent was a fool to show it to you. He knows perfectly well—"

"What does he know?" "Cynthia's people live at Fifteen—just two doors away."

"But—does that really matter, Steve?" "There's no use going against the ax."

"I didn't know there was an ax." "I didn't mean that, exactly. But I'm thinking of you. There are certain things you don't understand—yet. One of them is that Maplewood isn't one of those cities where no one knows who lives next door or all down the block."

"I understand. But they wouldn't throw garbage in our garden, would they?" Stephen was silent for a moment.

"We'll take it, of course, dear, if you have your heart set on it."

"No, I'd rather not. I'll get busy with the agent tomorrow—perhaps you'd best make a chart of the neighborhoods which are all right for us."

"I'm sorry, Maris."

"Forget it. It's nothing. Probably I will find one 10 times better, first thing tomorrow. But if I don't, if we have to take a dignify room in the Commercial hotel, I'll think it just right. It doesn't matter which side of the tracks we live, darling—so long as we are together."

"In time things will be easier every way," he said, "but just at first—"

She reached up and kissed him.

"And now just to prove I'm not an interfering wife, I'm going to step along."

As she opened the door, she faced Stephen's secretary about to enter.

"Pardon me, Mr. Holland, but the nurse is here with your little girl."

"Bring them in, please."

Maris said she would go along; she could meet Ellen another time; it was so long since father and child had seen each other, they would want to be alone together.

"Please stay, Maris. I want you to."

As she hesitated, the nurse and Ellen came in.

"Daddy," cried Ellen as she jumped into his arms and began hugging and kissing him. "Why did you stay away a hundred million years?"

"Didn't Mummy tell you I went on a train—a long way off—that I'd be back to see you?"

"Of course you came back to see me," she said as he put her down on the floor.

"Ellen," he said. "This is Maris."

"Hello," said the child with a smile.

"Hello," said Maris, with another smile.

"You have a funny hat, even if it is pretty."

"Then we're even," said Maris. "For you have a funny little nose and it's pretty too."

"How do you like my new shoes?"

Maris looked them over carefully and said they were the nicest shoes she had ever seen.

"I have a pair of sandals, too," said Ellen. "What do you like to laugh? Don't you like sandals?"

"Not always," said Maris. "But I'm sure I'll like yours."

"You've got something else funny beside your hat. Your name is awfully funny—but it's nice, too."

"I'm glad you approve," said Maris. "I hope you'll think everything about me is nice. And now—holding out her hand—"good-bye," Ellen. I must be running along."

Stephen followed Maris through the door.

"She's a darling, Steve," she said. "You stay longer and get acquainted?"

Maris shook her head.

"She's so little—let's not make her life any more mixed up than necessary. I hope we can be friends—but don't let's try to rush things."

She pressed his hand and hurried down the corridor.

Maris did find a house the next day. Stephen approved of it, too, especially as it was comfortably furnished and they could move in at once, without taking a long lease.

"We want our own home—if we can't buy one just right, we'll build," he said. "So you're in for a lot of looking around."

"I'll love it. And furnishing it, when we've found it—oh what an orgy that will be."

Stephen's mother had suggested giving a reception to introduce Maris to her friends and Stephen's, but as she had not recovered from her cold and as Maris and Stephen wished to be settled in their house, they vetoed the idea, for the present at least. Mrs. Holland said she was sorry, of course, but one with an acute ear for things not put in words, might have heard an undertone of relief to what she said.

FAMOUS CLOCKS.

The age-old center of time-telling is Greenwich, a town which forms a suburb of London. Look at a map of the eastern hemisphere, or of the globe, and find out where the zero of longitude is. It will run past the edge of London where Greenwich stands.

The clocks of Greenwich and Washington may be taken as "marvels of accuracy," but there are other clocks which have won fame for different reasons—some because they are large, some because of the "extra" things they do.

At Strassburg, in northern France, is a famous old clock in a cathedral. It has figures which strike the hours—half-hours and quarter-hours. Other figures point to the day of the week, and the date of the month. At noon Jesus and the Apostles move in procession, and a cock crows three times.

The British parliament building has an even more famous clock—Big Ben. It has four faces, each one 23 feet wide.

A New York office building has a clock with a dial 26 feet wide, and a still larger clock—with a face 38 feet in diameter—was set up over a factory at Jersey City, N. J., 30 years ago.

Watches may be called "little brothers of clocks." Some of them are of extremely small size. One shown at the Paris exposition in 1900 weighed less than one-thirtieth of an ounce. It was only half as wide as a dime, and the movement was thinner than a dime! It was bought by the Sultan of Morocco.

Georgia Orders For Young Pines Near 5 Million

Orders for 4,834,900 young pine trees have been received at the state's two nurseries at Albany and Flowery Branch, Forester Frank Heyward said yesterday.

"The orders are piling in," Heyward said, "some individuals buying up to a quarter million trees. The total sold last year by the state was 2,250,000. That was all we produced."

He listed among the purchasers A. H. Croom, Pembroke, 200,000 trees; W. H. Callan, Scott, 200,000; A. T. Fuller, Ocala, 250,000; G. L. Hinson, Hazlehurst, 150,000; R. K. Whitehead, Baxley, 100,000; Cason Callaway, LaGrange, 400,000; K. S. Varn, Hoboken, 100,000; the Chipmunk Manufacturing Company, near Gainesville, 100,000; and S. E. Vandiver, of LaVonia, 100,000.

The state nurseries charge $2 per thousand for these seedlings, delivered, a cut under last year's price, Heyward said.

Two other types of trees grown at the nurseries are black locust, long lasting as fence post material, and black walnut, for furniture.

Heyward warned that locusts and walnuts, unlike pines, must have good soil on which to grow.

PAULETTE SIGNS HERSELF AS 'MRS.'

Acquaintances Believe Chaplin and Actress Ready to Reveal Marriage.

DEL MONTE, Cal., July 7.—(P)—Film Actress Paulette Goddard and Charles Chaplin are to be teamed professionally again, and if Pebble Beach society is right, they are at last ready for the public to regard them as teamed maritally.

The actress, who for several years reportedly has been married to Chaplin, has been here for 10 days as Chaplin's house guest.

Her new acquaintances here, apparently with her consent, started calling her "Mrs. Chaplin."

Yesterday she registered as "Mrs. Charles Chaplin" in entering a tournament at the Cypress Point Golf Club. The social set accepted this as virtual confirmation of the long-standing rumors of her marriage to Chaplin.

Incidentally, she tied with Harry Hunt, of Pebble Beach, for first place in the tournament.

Reports from Hollywood said Chaplin would produce and personally direct a modern comedy drama starring Miss Goddard.

14 Youths Die As Fire Fighters Give Exhibition

LISBON, Portugal, July 7.—(P)—Fourteen boys died today in Coimbra when a gasoline-soaked building was set ablaze for a fire-fighting exhibition.

Six other boys were in a hospital with serious injuries. Many persons were injured among stampeding spectators.

Two fire brigades, officials were arrested. The government ordered an inquiry into the organization and execution of the display.

The boys, many of them sons of firemen, were hired for 10 escudos (45 cents) to play the parts of tenants in the four-story wooden structure.

The fire brigade was stationed at headquarters 400 yards away when the building was set afire.

The blaze swept swiftly through the flimsy structure and panicked spectators hindered the fire fighters striving to reach the victims.

Two boys perished in the flames. Eight were killed jumping from windows. The other victims died later in the hospital.

Love Ignites Fireworks in Movies Opening Today at Theater Here

Fox Presents 'Three Blind Mice,' Grand, 'Shopworn Angel,' Rialto, 'City Streets,' Paramount, 'Sinners in Paradise,' Capitol, 'Mr. Moto Takes a Chance.'

By LEE ROGERS, Motion Picture Editor.

Love—the old standby of the dramatic world—provides the fireworks in the majority of the new movies opening at the downtown theaters today.

Loretta Young and sisters, Marjorie Weaver and Pauline Moore, gamble their last—and first—$5,000 on catching a millionaire husband. Loretta is elected to pose as the heiress, the sisters as her servants. Only she catches the wrong man—Joel McCrea—and has to do a quick back up to catch David Niven. The picture is "Three Blind Mice" at the Fox.

Margaret Sullivan returns to the Grand today playing the Broadway actress in "Shopworn Angel," a picture of Broadway life during the World War days. It's another love picture with Jimmy Stewart as the doughboy and Walter Pidgeon as the man about town.

The Rialto is showing "City Streets," a good drama featuring Leo Carrillo and Edith Fellows.

Life on a desert island, where shipwrecked transpacific fliers are marooned, is shown in "Sinners in Paradise," at the Paramount. The leads are taken by John Boles, Madge Evans, Bruce Cabot and Marion Martin.

Opening Sunday at the Capitol, the ace detective, Mr. Moto, will return in his third picture, "Mr. Moto Takes a Chance."

"THE SHOPWORN ANGEL" COMES TO GRAND

Margaret Sullivan, who returned to films in "Three Comrades," opens with James Stewart in "The Shopworn Angel" at Loew's Grand theater today. Walter Pidgeon, Nat Pendleton and Alan Curtis are in the supporting cast.

"The Shopworn Angel" is a story of America's war days. The action takes place in New York, where a young westerner (James Stewart) is in training before being sent to France. Stewart is struck by a beautiful showgirl (Margaret Sullivan) and after assuring himself that he is not injured, she amiably offers the soldier a lift to the ferry.

Several of Stewart's soldier buddies see him getting out of the automobile and he pretends that he knows the famous young actress well. His comrades are dubious, and the next time they are on leave they challenge him to call on the girl. He meets her at the stage door. She is a good sport and helps carry out the deception.

The soldier finds himself falling very much in love with the girl. He knows nothing of her shady past, and believes she is ideal in every way. His devotion touches the girl, until she realizes that he will be bitterly hurt when he finds out about her. Then, when she tries to forget him, she realizes that she, too, is in love. "The Shopworn Angel" reaches its climax on the day before the soldier leaves for France.

"THREE BLIND MICE" OPENS AT FOX

With trunks full of gowns and hearts full of hope, three bright-eyed sisters go on a holiday fling at romance... that is the theme of the new romantic comedy, "Three Blind Mice," co-starring Loretta Young and Joel McCrea, at the Fox theater, opening today.

Loretta Young, Marjorie Weaver and Pauline Moore form the trio of midwestern girls who gamble their entire inheritance on the theory that it is "just as easy to Gordon, Helen Jerome Eddy, Arthur Loft and many others.

The director is Albert S. Rogell while Fred Niblo Jr. and Lou Breslow wrote the screen play from an original by I. Bernstein.

PARAMOUNT SHOWS "SINNERS IN PARADISE"

"Sinners in Paradise," opening today at the Paramount to share the spotlight with the March of Time's "G-Men of the Sea," is a film highlighting scenes of elemental love and hate when nine passengers are cast away on a tiny desert island in the Pacific after a giant airliner has caught fire and crashed.

In the leading roles are Madge Evans, John Boles, Bruce Cabot, Marion Martin, who makes her screen debut in the film.

The plot concerns the amazing character transformations that occur when civilized persons revert to the primitive, battling for existence against a stark background of tropical nature at its wildest.

March of Time tells a dramatic story of the United States coast guard.

MR. MOTO RETURNS TO CAPITOL

The Capitol, Atlanta's only vaudeville theater, Sunday brings a new mystery, thriller, "Mr. Moto Takes a Chance," starring Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent and J. Edward Bromberg.

This is the third in the series of Moto offerings, all of which have been presented at the Capitol and have drawn large crowds. In this newest offering, the oriental detective, Mr. Moto, penetrates the mystic jungle of Tong Mai and defying native sorcery, wells of death, poisonous blow-gun darts, brings to his audiences thrills galore in one of the most thrilling adventure pictures brought to the screen in many a day.

On the stage, starting Sunday, the Capitol management presents the new stage unit, "Top Speed Revue," which is said to live up to its name with a gala offering of 25 stage and radio stars in numerous entertaining acts of vaudeville.

Supporting the two stars is a cast that includes Tommy Bond, Mary ring Wayne (Kid Gallahad) Morris, June Travis and Barton MacLane ends Saturday along with "Tropical Nights" revue and "Yankee Doodle Varieties" on the stage.

Another amateur contest will be offered at 9 o'clock tonight. Six amateur acts of vaudeville will be offered as a special added attraction. Two big prizes will be awarded the winners selected by the audience.

Florence Rice is her younger sister, Irene, with suppressed desires to be a movie star. John Deal is Waldo, whom Miss Loy has chosen to marry her sister.

WPA SEWER WORK IN ATLANTA AREA TOTALS 58 MILES

$4,510,745 Spent on Fulton and DeKalb Projects, Report Shows.

Completion of 58 miles of trunk lines and lateral sewers in the metropolitan sewers system during the WPA's two-and-one-half-year record of construction was cited yesterday by L. B. Barrett, area engineer, in a report to Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state administrator.

The WPA also has completed the Intrenchment Creek disposal plant at a cost of $750,000, and has done many other jobs in connection with the new system, the report showed.

A total of $4,510,745 has been spent in the planned $6,000,000 program in which WPA co-operated with two counties, DeKalb and Fulton, and the city of Atlanta, Barrett said.

Approximately 3,500 WPA workers are now laying 10 to 12 miles of trunk lines, the report revealed. An additional 21 miles of trunk lines will be begun as soon as other WPA projects are finished.

Officials predicted that under the present schedule the remainder of the planned sewer projects will be finished and in operation by next March.

The longest single trunk line in the sanitary system—a 10-mile stretch from Emory University to the Chattahoochee river at the R. M. Clayton disposal plant—has been completed with the exception of an 80-foot cut through a railroad, it was explained.

Units yet to be completed in the sanitary system follow: Highland, 19,462 feet; Egan, 23,836 feet; Terrell creek, 18,206 feet; Beaver creek, 8,800 feet; Candler road, 2,700 feet; North Decatur, 14,911 feet. Work on the East Point line, 23,282 feet in length, began Wednesday, and construction of other units will begin soon, it was said.

WOMAN HELD FOR JURY IN $9 MAILBOX THEFT

Stella Scoggins, negroes, was held for the federal grand jury under bond of $500 on a charge of theft from the United States mails after a preliminary hearing yesterday before Commissioner E. S. Griffith.

The woman, arrested by Post Office Inspector L. A. Stone, admitted taking the letter which contained a check for $9.60 from the mail box of Charles Freeman, negro, of 257 Bowie street, last Friday. Her action had been motivated by the fact that Freeman had refused to "pay off" on a winning "bug number" he had written for her, she told the commissioner.

Tracy Foils Dastardly Plotters And Becomes Oompah by a Nose

Colonel Whoopen Blast Now Fades From the Picture With the Wog, Returning to the Funny Papers From Which He Sprang.

By COLONEL WHOOPEN BLAST, Political Commentator Extraordinaire.

Well, my long-suffering friends, we offer the last roundup of the balloting in the race for Oompah, to say nothing of the Wog and your ancient and loquacious correspondent. As I have been forecasting all along, Dick Tracy overcame the machinations, the blandishments and double-dealing of the clique who were backing the Wog for special purposes of their own. Here's the final score:

Candidate	Per Cent
Dick Tracy	33 1/2
The Wog	26
Jane Arden	12 1/2
Orphan Annie	9
Moon Mullins	6 1/2
Kayo Mullins	2 1/2
The Gumps	5
Smitty	3 1/2
Aunt Het	1 1/2
Jasper	1 1/2
Tarzan	1 1/2
All others—Less than	1

Need I say that Tracy is pleased as Punch? He came rushing out to the Roswell bridge in a police radio car last night, dived off the running board into the muddy Chattahoochee, floated quietly down stream to a peaceful old lodge where your correspondent, Finn MacCool, the Duke of Wellington and Justice J. Prince Webster were verifying the count—and there he received the official news that he'd been elected overwhelmingly.

"That's swell, that's very fine and dandy," declared the successful aspirant. "I suppose that makes it unnecessary for me to tell what I know about the plotters and that heavy, last-minute Wog vote." "I would say the less said the better."

"But can't I issue a statement as Oompah?" demanded Tracy. "There ought to be some way I can sound off about this high honor."

"You might," suggested the Justice, smartly, "sort of let yourself go a little in your telegrams replying to the telegrams of congratulation from all of your rival candidates. That'd be a smooth way."

"What telegrams?" demanded Tracy. "I haven't had a word out of a soul."

He paused a moment, considering. Then he nodded.

"Okay," he said, and moved off toward the road to Atlanta, "I'll fix it up."

So late last night each of the rival candidates in the Oompah contest (except the Wog) received the following message: "LET ME SAY IN ANSWER TO YOUR KINDLY WORDS OF CONGRATULATION THAT AS OOMPAH I INTEND TO CARRY OUT ALL OF MY CAMPAIGN PLEDGES STOP TO ADORN THE OFFICE AND MAKE IT SERVE THE PEOPLE STOP TO LET BYGONES BE BYGONES STOP NO HARD FEELINGS I HOPE! STOP BY THE WAY JUST WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO START SENDING THOSE TELEGRAMS OF COMMENDATION AND CONGRATULATION?"

(SIGNED) "TRACY OOMPAH-ELECT."

Early this morning, just before press time, as Tracy was sitting disconsolately watching the traffic light at Lee street and Avon avenue (the most profitable traffic light in Atlanta) a messenger found him and delivered the following telegram:

"WELL, YOU FOILED US AFTER ALL STOP GUESS WE MAY AS WELL TELL THE TRUTH NOW STOP THERE NEVER WAS ANY WOG EXCEPT THE ONE THOSE FOLKS AT JUG TAVERN IN JACKSON COUNTY USED TO SEE ON STORMY NIGHTS STOP WE THEREFORE WITHDRAW THAT TWENTY-SIX PER CENT WOG VOTE AND DISTRIBUTE IT EQUALLY AMONG ALL THE OTHER CANDIDATES INCLUDING WHOOPEN BLAST AND THE MAN JONES STOP BEST WISHES FOR YOUR ADMINISTRATION."

(SIGNED) "THE PLOTTERS."

Tracy's first official act was chivalrous.

"I'm out of town a lot," he said, "and somebody has to be holding down the Oompah office at all times. So I'm appointing Jane as Deputy Oompah, to serve when I'm busy dashing off in all directions, fighting crime and such."

Well, friends, that just about tells the story. See you in the funny papers!

Sir Stork Wins 2 Races Here In Photo Finish

Sir Stork had two victories chalked up to his credit yesterday in close races with ambulances and Grady hospital attaches.

A siren and screeching brakes aroused the late staff at about 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A wheel stretcher was rushed out immediately but it arrived too late. Before the ambulance door could be opened a baby girl was born to Mrs. W. T. Harmon, 43, of 445 Pryor street, S. W.

Just a short time before a similar scene had been enacted. A car with a steaming radiator skidded to a stop at the ambulance entrance. Doctors and nurses jumped into action but they were not fast enough. A boy was born in the car to Mrs. Benjamin Webb, of Alpharetta.

Both mothers and their babies were reported "getting along nicely" last night.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN BARNES SLAYING

Katherine Grant Turned Over to Clayton Officials.

A woman listed as Katherine Grant, 26, of a Berean avenue address, was arrested by city detectives yesterday and turned over to Clayton county authorities as an investigation continued into the death of Elmer D. Barnes, 25, of East Atlanta, early Sunday.

Barnes' body was found in a ditch near Jonesboro. His skull had been crushed by a heavy blow. A coroner's jury found that he died "at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

The arrest was made by Detectives M. B. Johnson and D. L. Taylor, who described Miss Grant as "the woman in the case." She is said to have admitted that she made a round of Clayton county roadhouses Saturday night with Barnes and five other men.

PAGE-HARRIS CASE IS SET IN TOOMBS

Court To Decide Whether Councilman Is Qualified.

LYONS, Ga., July 7.—Judge R. N. Hardeman, of Louisville, has called a special term of Toombs superior court to convene Monday for the trial of only one case—B. R. Page vs. D. C. Harris, mayor of Vidalia.

Page, a Vidalia businessman, was elected councilman in the regular election late in 1937. When city council organized, he was barred because of a complaint that he had not paid his taxes six months prior to the date of election.

Page, through his attorneys, sought legal action, and Judge Hardeman took the matter under advisement. Two weeks ago, Judge Hardeman modified an injunction, permitting council to meet, and at the same time ordered that the matter of Page's qualifications be heard by a jury.

MAYOR APPROVES ODD JOB PROGRAM

Civic Improvement Papers Signed; 2,000 to 3,000 Will Get Work.

City council's program of civic improvements had the approval of Mayor Hartsfield yesterday as he signed all papers passed at Tuesday's council session.

Formal application for a $300,000 WPA odd-job program and allocation of approximately $30,000 of liquor license revenue for improvements were included in the papers signed by the mayor.

The $300,000 allocation sets up $11,000 to assure the construction of a radio control tower at Candler Field. Council already had provided $20,000 for this purpose. Also included in allocation is $13,000 for the purchase of right-of-way for the Magnolia street viaduct, to be constructed by the State Highway Department at a cost of $130,000.

An estimated 2,000 to 3,000 persons will be put to work under the odd-job program, which will include beautification of approximately 60 miles of sewer lines constructed under the metropolitan sewer program, digging of storm drainage channels and other manual labor jobs.

AAA TO GET IDEA OF CROP CONTROL

Estimate of Cotton Acreage Will Be Made Today.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—The administration will get an idea tomorrow how successful it has been in getting southern farmers to comply with the new crop control law.

The tip will come when the Agriculture Department's crop-reporting board estimates the acreage in cotton cultivation on July 1.

Because of a surplus of American cotton sufficient to supply normal domestic and export needs for a whole year, the department had asked congress to plant no more than about 28,500,000 acres compared with about 35,000,000 seeded for the 1937 crop.

Tomorrow's report will make no forecast of the probable production. However, private estimates have predicted a crop of less than 12,000,000 bales, or the smallest since 1935.
